WET? GLOOMY? IT'S ALL TRUE

This wet, sunless, miserable month of August has been no figment of your imagination. The figures bear that out.

So far, rainfall has totalled 37.6 millimeters (about 1½ inches) with half — 19.1 mm coming in one day . . . Thursday.

Average rainfall for the month is 24.6 mm.

Sunshine is down nearly 100 hours. As of Thursday, the sun had broken through the storm clouds a total of 86.1 hours. In a normal August we would have enjoyed 184.4 hours of sun up to now.

Despite the appearance of the sun today, the weatherman forecasts more showers over the weekend with the possibility of an improvement in conditions by next Tuesday.

B.C. Blocks BNA Issue

BANFF (CP) — B.C. appeared to be the major holdout Thursday as provincial premiers wrestled with the problem of patriating Canada's constitution from Britain.

The 10 premiers began talking about the British North America Act late Wednesday in Edmonton and continued their discussions through Thursday morning.

They emerged from Government House without issuing a press communique on their deliberations, with B.C. apparently the lone holdout on how to amend the constitution once it is brought to Canada.

The same subject was on the agenda for today's final session here.

Prime Minister Trudeau has given the premiers until Sept. 15 to come up with a way of bringing the constitution to Canada from the Parliament of the United Kingdom, after which, the prime minister said, he would act on his own to move the act of confederation across the Atlantic.

Sources at the conference also said Alberta injected a surprise note into the proceedings with suggestions for provisions which may set up a stumbling block to any complete agreement.

The proposal, according to sources, partially included the need for unanimity of all the provinces in any constitutional changes.

Sources were now predicting the probability there would be only partial agreement on any constitutional matters and that there was a possibility, if a partial consensus could be reached, that the premiers would meet again in

Row Simmers, Plumbers Out

VANCOUVER (CP) — Members of the Plumbers, Pipefitters and Steamfitters Union walked off the job Thursday afternoon at construction sites operated by 15 Vancouver-based contractors, members of Construction Labor Relations Association (CLRA).

The move did not mean a repeat, however, of the 37-day strike-lockout in the province's construction industry that ended just over a week ago with an industrial inquiry report.

Ray Callard, business agent for the union, said 200 union members were involved in the walkout Thursday and picket lines would only be set up at the locations of the firms affected. Construction work could continue at sites operated by those companies so long as it was not the work of members of the plumbers' union, he said.

Callard said the reason behind the strike was four issues that remained outstanding between the union and CLRA, bargaining agent for about 850 contractors.

He would not elaborate on the issues. He said there was some contention between the two sides as to what had been agreed upon and it would be better not to "negotiate through the press."

Callard said the union has asked CLRA to extend by at least one week the period within which the union could act on its last strike vote. That period under the provincial labor code is three months.

The company refused and Callard said the first bloc of workers, whose strike notice was first to expire, walked off the job. He said the next walkoff by a bloc of workers would not be until sometime next week.

Strike votes were taken last May by the 3,200 union members working for CLRA contractors.

Callard said the contractors were given notice of the union's intention to strike, but the company asked for no new talks and none have been scheduled.

Stu Cleavely, a union spokesman, earlier said that the membership met last week and voted to reject the report by industrial inquiry commissioner Jim Kinnaird as amended by CLRA.

The report recommended wage increases of 11.2 per cent to 13.6 per cent on base rates ranging from $9.50 to $12.19 an hour.

CDC Profit Up 79%

VANCOUVER (CP) — The city-based Canada Development Corp. (CDC) today announced profits rose 79 per cent to $16.1 million for the six months ended June 30 from $9 million in the first six months of 1975.

The corporation said in a news release that profits available for common shares after payment of regular quarterly dividends on preferred shares for the six-month period were $7.5 million or 24 cents a share compared with $6.1 million or 20 cents a share for the corresponding period last year.

The statement said profit improvement was mainly attributable to continued improved performance of polysar Ltd. and the inclusion of CDC Oil and Gas Ltd. acquired at the end of 1975.

Revenue in the first half of 1976 rose to $276 million from $230 million last year, an increase of 21 per cent.

After payment of regular preferred dividends, profit for the quarter was $2.9 million or .09 a share compared with $3.5 million or .11 a share in the second quarter of 1975.

$26,110 Theft Admitted

A Victoria man pleaded guilty in Victoria provincial court today to stealing $26,110 from the Victoria Autistic Children's Society over the past 13 months.

John B. Sullivan, 42, of 707 Esquimalt Rd., who sobbed as he appeared before Judge William Ostler, also admitted to stealing between $8,000 and $9,000 from Old Country Produce Ltd., a local company in which he was a partner.

Court was told the motive behind the thefts was "to entertain friends and deal with his loneliness."

Sullivan turned himself in to the Victoria city police fraud squad Thursday after talking to his doctor. He had been a member of the Autistic Children's Society for five years and its secretary-treasurer for the past 2½ years.

Court was told the stolen funds came from the human resources department and were intended to pay salaries of aides and teachers. Instead Sullivan wrote at least 48 cheques to himself or his business, ranging in size from $125 to $4,000.

He became partner-bookkeeper in the business recently and skimmed cash from the daily accounts.

Sullivan, who was remanded in custody to Sept. 3 for preparation of a pre-sentence report and sentence, was 12 years a lay brother and teacher in California before returning to Victoria about eight years ago.

The society was reported to have a bank overdraft of $500 Thursday.

Autism is a mysterious disorder which leaves those afflicted unable to use language. Autistic children can be either completely withdrawn or hyperactive.

Sullivan had been deeply involved on volunteer work with the group, serving as tag day chairman in raising funds.

A former delegate to the Victoria Labor Council from the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, he led a campaign earlier this year for a residential treatment centre for autistic children which gathered more than 6,000 signatures on a petition.

U.S. Planes Join Alert in Korea

Times News Service

U.S. troops, bolstered by the dispatch of two squadrons of warplanes to Korea, were on special alert today and North Korea ordered its troops on a "war posture" in response to growing tension over the border slaying of two American officers.

U.S. forces near the Panmunjom truce village were in full combat gear Thursday, taking up positions overlooking North Korea. All passes and leaves were cancelled for the 42,000 American soldiers and airmen in South Korea.

U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger today called the beating deaths of the two officers a "premeditated act of murder."

"We cannot permit the principle to be established that Americans can simply be assaulted with impunity any place that some dictator or some aggressive country decides to score some points," Kissinger said in an interview.

Kissinger said the administration's response to the incident "depends on what it indicates about North Korean intentions. It also depends on whether we get any satisfactory response to our demand for explanations and reparations . . ."

"There have been certain reinforcements sent in order to discourage any attempts by the North Koreans to escalate it and we've increased the readiness of our forces there," Kissinger said.

In Washington, Pentagon spokesman Tod Hullin said Thursday, "I don't have any indication that we have any plans to take military action at this time," but added, "I'm not ruling anything in or out."

A North Korean Communist Party newspaper said American "manoeuvres" in Korea "have entered an extremely reckless stage" and accused the United States of "kindling the blasting fuse of war."

In Seoul, 35 miles south of Panmunjom, South Korean President Park Chung-hee said today any future North Korean acts of provocation would be met with immediate retaliation.

"A mad dog needs a stick," Park said. "There is no reason why we should be unilaterally subject to their provocation.

"From now on, if they (North Koreans) stage illegal acts of provocation, we will take immediate punitive measures, whether such acts are big or small, and all the responsibilities therefrom will have to be borne by them."

Government sources said South Korean forces also were on precautionary alert. U.S. officials have estimated North Korea has 410,000 army troops and South Korea 560,000.

YES . . . BUT . . .

The current issue of Unity News, the Social Credit party's official publication printed this week, carries a report that the party conducted an "enormously successful" booth at the Pacific National Exhibition with the premier, cabinet ministers, MLAs and party workers all participating.

Party workers also appear to be "enormously successful" in getting the news out to the faithful on time — the PNE doesn't open until Saturday.

Pacific Press Settles

VANCOUVER (CP) — The dispute that halted publication of Vancouver's two daily newspapers for two weeks ended Thursday night when Pacific Press Ltd. and the Joint Council of Newspaper Unions accepted recommendations for a resumption of production.

The recommendations were contained in a non-binding report on the dispute by a three-member panel of the B.C. Labor Relations Board.

The report was brought down Wednesday and members of the five unions represented by the Joint Council voted all day Thursday on the contents.

Dave McIntyre, co-chairman of the Joint Council, said following a meeting of the Joint Council and Pacific Press at the LRB offices that the union membership voted

Safeway Store Hit

EDMONTON (CP) — Three masked men, two carrying sawed-off shotguns, held an Edmonton family hostage early today in a quickly-executed extortion operation.

The family of six was shaken but safe. The men escaped with an undisclosed amount of money from a grocery store in northwest Edmonton, police said.

Brink went to the store, left the money in his car in the parking lot and then went to a restaurant to wait for a telephone call from the armed men.

The call never came and he alerted police who went to the store and found the car gone.

33 Blacks Die In S. Africa

Times News Services

JOHANNESBURG — Police said today 33 blacks were killed in three days of anti-government rioting in black townships around Port Elizabeth, the centre of South Africa's automobile industry.

"More bodies have been found," a Port Elizabeth police spokesman said. "Some of them were killed by knives; others were run down by motor vehicles, and about two were shot."

Police said 19 more deaths had been confirmed. Many of the victims were killed by police gunfire.

The area around the southeastern coastal city was "relatively calm" today, a police spokesman said.

Police Minister James Kruger said in a speech Thursday night that almost all the organizers of South Africa's continuing racial upheavals have been arrested.

At least 14 blacks died Wednesday when the violence swept through the all-black suburbs of New Brighton, Zwide and Kwazekele. More than $1.15 million damage was done to buildings and vehicles, township officials said.

South Africa's industrialists began calling for sweeping improvements in political, living and employment conditions in the riot-torn black townships which supply their labor force.

REFUGEES ATTACKED SAYS UN

GENEVA (UPI) — The United Nations high commissioner for refugees said today Rhodesian troops destroyed a Mozambique camp containing 3,000 refugees from Rhodesia and killed as many as 1,000 people in a raid early this month.

The agency's delegate in Mozambique reported some 1,000 fatalities and more than 500 wounded and said the camp, one of the three UNHCR camps near the Rhodesian border, was destroyed.

It also was reported that he saw mass graves containing mainly women and children.

The government of Mozambique appealed to the UNHCR to resettle the refugees, asking for $25,000 in food. A refugee official said the survivors were moved deeper into Mozambique.

"Such a violation cannot be tolerated," a UNHCR spokesman said, "and the government of Mozambique should ask for a meeting of the Security Council."

TRUNK LID SLAMS ON MODEST SOLDIER

WOODLAND, Wash. (AP) — The demands of modesty proved almost fatal in the case of a soldier from Oregon who was rescued Wednesday night by the state patrol.

Troopers say Jerry Stubblefield, 32, of Milwaukie, Ore., spent three days locked in the trunk of his car near here.

He told officers that he had climbed into the trunk early Monday to change clothes. He pulled the lid down for modesty's sake and it clicked shut.

The car was parked on a ramp leading to interstate 5. Troopers and Cowlitz County deputies said they checked the car a number of times but it wasn't until Wednesday when a patrolman was preparing the car for impoundment, that Stubblefield spoke up.

He was treated for dehydration.

The soldier said he was on his way to his base near Tacoma when the car ran out of gas. He said he wanted to change into his uniform so that he might report for work when he finally made it to the fort.

Changes Urged for 747s

Times News Services

LONDON — Important modifications could be made mandatory for all Boeing 747 jumbo jets as a result of the findings of an East African inquiry into the crash of a Lufthansa 747 in November, 1974.

The crash, at Nairobi, killed 59 passengers and crew; 98 people survived including the flight crew.

The official report, by the accident investigation branch of the East African Community, includes two specific design criticisms.

—The system of indicator lights in use at the time did not provide adequate warning that the leading edge flaps were not extended after take-off.

—The stall warning system did not give adequate warning of the critical condition of the aircraft because it was not programmed to take account of the leading edge flap position.

The plane crashed 35 seconds after take-off because the pneumatic system which operates the leading edge laps had not been switched on. This caused a stall which in the words of the report "the pilots were unable to identify in the short time available for recovery."

A statement by Lufthansa says that it and other airlines have decided to introduce all the recommendations proposed by the report. These also involve check procedures.

A failure of the crew to complete their checklist items satisfactorily is listed as a major contributory cause of the crash — the only fatal accident ever to a 747.

In this connection the report criticized Lufthansa's safety checks, which are thought likely to apply to a number of other airlines.

STORES CLOSE, 250 JOBLESS

All 10 Greater Victoria Canada Safeway Ltd. stores closed Thursday night and 250 employees were laid off.

Only eight of 93 Safeway stores in B.C. remained open for business today — two in Prince George and one each in Penticton, 100 Mile House, Williams Lake, Prince Rupert, Terrace and Smithers.

Those stores are expected to shut Saturday.

The closure is due to a dispute between the company and the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union which represents 800 workers at company warehouses and processing plants.

Negotiations broke off Aug. 10 and union members were subsequently locked out at Lucerne milk and ice cream plants, MacDonald's Consolidated Ltd., warehouses in Victoria, Burnaby and Dawson Creek and the Empress products tea and coffee plant and warehouse in Richmond.

About 5,000 employees are affected by the shutdown.

The union has said the dispute centres on the company's desire to eliminate a grievance clause from the contract.

Reservoir Gets Borrowing Okay For $1 Million

Authority to borrow $1 million to complete first-phase financing of the 20-million gallon Haliburton reservoir project was given today to Greater Victoria Water District.

Water commissioner Ron Upward told water district board members the money will supplement $1.5 million held in reserve for the project.

Tenders are expected to be called next February.

Upward said an increase in the wholesale price of water to Greater Victoria municipalities may be required next year to help pay for the undertaking. He suggested three cents per thousand gallons for a new rate of 21 cents.

Water district directors, representing Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt approved the calling of tenders Oct. 1 for the $1 million borrowing expected to bring a rate of about 9¾ per cent to the successful bidder.

Supply and overflow pipes for the new reservoir located on an 11.8-acre site east of Patricia Bay Highway on Haliburton have been installed in readiness for the first 5-million gallon cell.

Upward said capital projects have been financed largely out of revenue from logging part of the watershed, but a forest industry slump had depressed income from this source.

The Haliburton reservoir is being built as an intermediate storage point in the 25-mile primary system supplied from Sooke Lake.

Upward said it represents the final project of a $15 million water supply development program begun in 1964.

Directors also gave Upward permission to approach Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. with a list of tentative water supply projects such as pipeline upgrading over the next four years.

The list totals about $3.7 million, two-thirds of which may qualify for 25 per cent funding by the federal agency for a total grant of $600,000.

Upward said CMHC will meet to discuss the subject at the end of August.

One such undertaking is extension of larger diameter pipe to Latoria Road, where the last installation was in 1956. The commissioner said water pressure in the area drops as low as 25 pounds per square inch.

STEPHEN

UVIC POST TO STEPHEN

Former Victoria Mayor Hugh R. Stephen has been appointed to the University of Victoria Board of Governors.

Stephen will replace J. E. Whitlam, who resigned in April with two years to go in his three-year term.

Whitlam, of Ladysmith, said he resigned because he felt the position could be better filled by someone who lived closer to Victoria.

Stephen will complete the two-year unexpired portion of Whitlam's term.

It's a 'Steel' at Court

Public Works Minister Alex Fraser said today he will find out next week why sheets of painted steel are being placed over brickwork on the walls of Victoria Law Courts on Burdett Street.

Fraser, reached in Vancouver where he is en route to Quebec City for a conference of ministers of public works, said he doesn't know why the brickwork is being covered up.

All he had been able to find out, he said, "is that they couldn't get matching bricks for the two new storeys."

But a local masonry contractor, Sandy Ormiston, said it is "nonsense" that matching bricks couldn't be found.

"Any manufacturer in Western Canada could match the pattern on the lower floors," said Ormiston.

The courthouse is having two floors added to the three-floor building and the steel sheeting covering most of two sides of the building is expected to be extended so that all brickwork is covered.

Fraser said he will have answers next week when he returns to Victoria and, he added, "they'd better be good answers."

He said that there has been no order to stop the sheet metal work, now well under way.

Pacific Press Dispute Ends reluctantly to accept the report.

Dave Stinson, general manager of Pacific Press, said there will be an immediate recall of all 1,400 employees and it was planned to produce this afternoon's edition of The Sun.

The morning Province was expected to resume publication Saturday.

Under the terms of the settlement, the company will deduct the equivalent of 1½ days' pay from each employee based on retroactive amounts contained in a new two-year agreement signed in July.

Both sides also agreed to withdraw any legal action stemming from the dispute, including disciplinary action against any employee who took part in slowdowns and work stoppages from July 26 to Aug. 7 when the company suspended publicaton.

In addition, the company will not be required to pay overtime for work caused by the slowdowns or work stoppages.

Full recall of staff must be completed within 30 hours of the formal signing of the agreement shortly before 10 p.m. Thursday.

McIntyre refused to say how the union membership had voted on the settlement.

"We're not announcing any votes and the result won't be made public," he said.

He said he was happy the dispute has ended and he didn't anticipate any further employee work stoppages at Pacific Press as a result of the settlement.

Stinson said it was a middle-of-the-road settlement for the company.

"I guess it's the kind of settlement nobody likes," he said.

The dispute began July 26 when Pacific Press employees began work slowdowns and work stoppages to protest a company statement that wage increases above the federal Anti-Inflaiton Board guideline of 8.3 per cent would not be paid until the board ruled on the new two-year contract.

The company said it wold agree to pay the 8.3 per cent and bank the remainder until the board ruled on the contract, which gave employees a 16-per-cent wage increase retroactive to Nov. 1, 1975, in the first year and eight per cent in the second year.

A senior reporter made $320 a week under the previous contract.

The Labor Relations Board already has ruled that the company was justified in withholding raises above the anti-inflation guidelines until a ruling on the contract is made.

Stinson met with the board in Ottawa earlier this month but there was no word on when a decision would come down.

No Lassa Fever

TORONTO (CP) — Officials at the Ontario health ministry said Thursday that test results conducted on a St. Catharines, Ont., woman suspected of having Lassa fever proved negative. The tests show that Olga Kamckey, 56, was exposed eo the rare African disease and has Lassa fever antibodies in her blood, but does not have a contagious case of it.

MORE SMOKE THAN USUAL IN THE BAR

Patrons at the British Public Schools Club, 1218 Langley, were forced to vacafe the premises Thursday night when smoke started to fill the bar.

Victoria firemen discovered a pipe from the furnace in the basement had blown its casing, allowing smoke to escape.

Shoal Bay Report Awaited

Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith said Thursday his council is still waiting for a copy of the engineering consultant's report which states a sewage pumping station must be built at or close to Shoal Bay.

Location of the 60-foot by 60-foot concrete pumphouse, part of a $12.6 million project to pipe sewage through a new outfall at Clover Point, has residents of the 500-block Beach Drive area up in arms.

Smith said he was in no position to comment on the report until he receives it but he hoped it isn't "a rehash" of what has been done before.

"I'm hoping they're having a new study on the viability of extending the outfall at McMicking Point without a pumping station," Smith said.

He added, "If there has to be a pumping station, it should be in the least-offensive location and built in the least-offensive way. There should be involvement with those residents around Shoal Bay who are very much concerned, and rightfully concerned about it."

Bertram Butler, a member of the Shoal Bay Ratepayers Association, said today that the Capital Region District is missing the whole point and should consider using the $12.6 million for the start of a proper treatment and disposal plant.

"It's ludicrous in the last quarter of the century to be still considering dumping raw sewage into the sea," Butler said. "That $12.6 million would be a good start on a proper treatment and dispoal plant.

"Why not get on with a proper plant? I've been in countries where they've had them for years and years. (Butler is a former ambassador for the external affairs department). Singapore, for instance, had one long before the war. Here we are sending aid to developing countries and we can't afford a proper plant."

B.C. Throws Block

Toronto in September in an effort to meet the federal deadline on agreement set by Prime Minister Trudeau.

Premier Bill Bennett said any changes must "reflect the realities of Canada today" and he referred to his province as a distinct region of the country with the fastest growth rate of any.

If the constitution is to be changed, then B.C., as a region, would have conditions on any changes made, Bennett said.

B.C., he said, is recognized by the federal government as a distinct region and much of representation in Canada, such as on the Supreme Court and in the Senate, is based on regions.

Bennett said under the circumstances he saw no problem with leaving the BNA Act where it is.

He added there is no difficulty in bringing the constitution across the Atlantic if the provinces and the federal government decide to leave the question of an amending formula to a later date.

If the formula is to be decided first, then the process is going to be a long one.

Record low daytime temperatures and moderate rain were recorded throughout the province on Thursday as a cool moist airmass pushed inland from the Pacific in a winterlike fashion. Maximum temperatures of 11 degrees in Terrace, 13 in Revelstoke 17 in Penticton, 15 in Vancouver and 13 in Victoria and Nanaimo were record low maximums for any August 19th on record and were from 3 to 6 degrees cooler than the previous records. Ford Risks TV Debate to Catch Carter

GOP ticket Dole (left) and Ford

Times News Services

KANSAS CITY (CP) — President Ford, one of the most divisive party fights in Republican history behind him, is making plans today for a Colorado vacation before moving on to his next battle — the campaign against Jimmy Carter and the Democrats for possession of the White House and control of the United States Congress.

After choosing Senator Robert Dole of Kansas, as his vice-presidential running mate, Ford accepted his party's nomination Thursday night with a slashing attack on the Democrats and a plea for Republican unity as the 31st national convention ended in a burst of raw emotion.

To win the Nov. 2 general election, he said "will take the voices and the votes of many Americans who are not Republicans."

Ford launched his campaign against Carter with a challenge to "debate the real issues face to face." Before the Republican convention adjourned, Carter accepted.

From his home in Plains, Ga., Carter called on Ford to join him in a debate or series of debates that would provide "the fullest and most detailed examination of the programs offered by both sides."

The delegates roared their approval in what was probably the most emotional and most spontaneous response Ford received during the convention.

But the final emotional moment belonged to the man Ford defeated. After his acceptance speech, Ford called Ronald Reagan and his wife, Nancy, to the podium.

The crowd of about 3,000 in steaming Kemper Arena rose and cheered the entrance of Reagan who came here nearly deadlocked in delegate support with Ford, only to lose the nomination on Wednesday's first ballot.

They had planned to issue Carter's challenge this morning, but they released it Thursday night at a hastily called news conference before Ford had even finished his acceptance speech.

The proposed television debate would be the first since 1960 when Republican Richard Nixon took on Democrat John Kennedy. Many political experts have said that it was those debates more than any other single factor, which cost Nixon that election.

The president's announcement is regarded as a wild punch, but it may be the best chance for Ford to deliver a blow that would allow him to catch up to his Democratic opponent's 2-to-1 lead in he public opinion polls.

If the president misses, his calculated gamble could prove disastrous. Carter delivers his political message slowly, deliberately and with a polished ease that only accentuates Ford's lacklustre oratorial style.

Dole: Tart-Tongued, Tough

By PAUL WHITELAW
Special to the Times

KANSAS CITY — Nice Guy Jerry Ford has turned for help in his uphill fight against the Democrats to one of the toughest brawlers in American politics.

Robert Dole, the conservative Kansas senator picked by the president as his running mate, is a tart-tongued campaigner who can take it as well as dish it out.

The vice-presidential choice has set the tone for the fall election campaign — guaranteeing it will be a knock-down, drag-'em-out political alley fight with a lot of punches below the belt.

Ford will be relying on the senator's bruising political style to compensate for his own lacklustre oratory in his struggle for political survival against Democratic presidential nominee Jimmy Carter.

Dole has an instinct for the political jugular and won't need any prompting to go on the attack in an effort to reduce Carter's insurmountable-looking two-to-one lead in the public opinion polls.

The senator's conservative voting record in Congress should also help to heal at least some of the wounds inflicted on the Republican party by Ford's feud with Ronald Reagan over the presidential nomination.

Another factor in Dole's selection was presumably his popularity in the "farm belt" states of the Midwest, a traditional source of Republican strength that may not be safe for the president this fall. Many farmers have been angered by Republican agricultural policies, particularly grain export embargoes, which the senator denounced. Dole also is knowledgeable on foreign policy.

Dole's brand of politics is so aggressive that it can turn off as many voters, and even Republican colleagues, as it turns on.

When former president Richard Nixon named him to head the Republican National Committee in 1971, then-Senator William Saxbe of Ohio — a fellow Republican — disparaged Dole as a "hatchet man" who was so antagonistic he "couldn't sell beer on a troop ship."

But Dole is also noted for his sense of humor, albeit caustic, that is directed as often as not at himself.

Tough Decision Saved Tree Surgeon's Life

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Somewhere in Vancouver six years ago a grieving couple made a tough decision which gave John Craddock a life worth living.

For both Craddock, now a tree surgeon on the Saanich Peninsula, and the couple in Vancouver it was a time of big trouble.

The parents were waiting while their 17-year-old son lay dying in hospital of head injuries in a motorcycle accident. It was only a matter of time and it took five days.

Craddock, who had been teaching at S. J. Willis junior secondary school, was a sort of cripple with an uncertain future ever since his kidneys had failed the year before. Twice a week he suffered through renal dialysis just to stay alive, lying on a hospital bed eight hours at a time while his blood was cleansed by an artificial kidney.

Sometimes the shunt in his arm clogged. He always felt below par, his diet was spartan and the man who liked a few beers with friends was now allowed only a little tea.

His future was an ominous question mark about the time a doctor in Vancouver approached the couple whose son was dying and explained about kidney transplants.

The first problem: kidneys must be removed from a donor within a few moments after his or her death. So a decision by next-of-kin must be made before their loved one is even dead. That's too wrenching an experience for most people so there is always a chronic shortage of kidney donors.

But the parents decided in favor of it and Craddock received one of the boy's kidneys because there was such a good tissue match. The single kidney was implanted not where his own kidneys had been removed but upside-down beside his stomach. Slowly, over several weeks while he remained on dialysis, it began to work, taking over the intricate job of filtering the blood.

Craddock was told not to expect more than five years of use from his transplanted kidney. That was over six years ago and it is still working well. He is the first to admit the decision by those Vancouver parents transformed his life.

Before the transplant, "I could see I had nowhere to go but out." He describes dialysis as "no barrel of laughs but you can live with it." Still, it left him with no stamina, no strength for teaching or having fun. He dragged himself from one day to the next.

CRADDOCK

With the new kidney working, he split cord after cord of wood, then satisfied an urgent desire to see something more of the world by visiting Spain. Now he operates his own one-man business, Westcra Tree and Shrub Care.

And he has a beer or two with friends when he wants to and is able to eat anything he wants.

"I feel perfectly strong, optimistic, relatively immortal. I can go where I want, when I want. That's the big thing."

The pills he must take every other day to block his body from rejecting that foreign but precious kidney render him a little more susceptible to things like colds and flu. So he's careful.

But the things he enjoys most, like playing ball with his son, going for walks or sailing, he can do.

"Fun is what you do with your spare energy," Craddock says. "I had none when I was on dialysis. And I was unemployable."

There are 19 men and women waiting for kidney transplants in B.C., says Dr. John Price, director of the kidney unit at Vancouver General Hospital.

Two of them are living in the Victoria area, a man and a woman, and the woman has been waiting for years, probably as long as anyone, he adds.

Craddock's transplanted kidney isn't near being a record-setter. There are cases in the province of more than eight years and elsewhere of 12 years and better.

The first kidney transplants were done in Boston in the early '50s and renal dialysis began at Seattle in 1960, he says.

The transplant success record in Vancouver is excellent, with about 70 per cent still functioning after five years.

The British Columbia branch of the Kidney Foundation of Canada offers a way anyone can become a potential kidney donor for the cost of a postage stamp and a few moments to jot a note.

On request it will mail an explanatory pamphlet which contains a wallet-sized card. Fill out and carry the card and it shows that in the event of a fatal accident, you're willing to offer someone like John Craddock a new life.

Address of the foundation's B.C. branch is: suite 202, 395 West Broadway, Vancouver, B.C. V5Y 1A7.

ROBIN HOOD ROBBERY

CHERRY HILL, N.J. (UPI) — Robin Hood and his men have taken to knocking off convenience stores.

Police said Thursday three men, one armed with a bow and arrow, held up a local Seven-11 store and escaped on foot with about $200 late Wednesday night.

While the archer held several customers and employees at bay, a second man emptied the cash register and the third man watched for police.

Police said Thursday they had made no arrests in connection with the holdup.

Random Shelling Kills 140

BEIRUT (AP) Christian and Moslem militias traded artillery barrages today, ignoring Arab League efforts to stop random shelling of residential quarters by both sides in the Lebanese civil war.

Hospital officials estimated that about 140 persons were killed and 180 wounded in fighting during the night in Beirut and the mountains of eastern and northern Lebanon. More than 34,000 are estimated to have been killed in the civil war since April 1975. Officials put the civilian toll during the latest day-long outbreak at 28 dead and more than 60 wounded.

Christian sources said shelling intensified along the front line between the southern Beirut suburbs of Chiyah and Ein Rummaneh.

Witnesses said more than 15 apartment buildings were set afire by Palestinian shelling of Christian hill towns in the mountains east of Beirut.

Head Found

MALIBU, Calif. (UPI) — The severed head of a Van Nuys bride — married less than two weeks ago — has been found in a supermarket trash bin.

The headless body of Elizabeth Camacho, 27, was found by her mother and sister Wednesday morning sprawled on the floor of her apartment.

Police would not disclose who found the head or exactly where it was disposed. The woman's head was recovered 12 hours after her decapitated body was found.

The victim's 26-year-old husband, Orlando Camacho, surrendered to police several hours after the body was found and was booked on suspicion of murder. Arraignment was expected today.

Marcos Surveys Damage

MANILA (AP) — President Ferdinand Marcos and his wife flew to Cotabato City on the south coast of Mindanao island today to inspect areas ravaged by earthquakes and tidal waves earlier this week. A mild aftershock struck Cotabato before their arrival.

The Philippines National Disaster Co-Ordinating Centre said 3,131 bodies have been counted and 3,117 persons are missing. Most of the missing were believed to have been swept out to sea and drowned by the tidal waves that followed the first of Tuesday's two severe quakes.

More than 150,000 persons wes reported homeless, and Marcos said 60,000 were in relocation camps.

Reports from Mindanao, the Philippines' biggest southern island, said epidemics were feared in some areas. But officials said medical teams are coping adequately with the thousands of injured.

Military planes were flying emergency supplies of food, clothing and medicine ot the stricken area. Officials said supplies of food and rice were adquate.

Zamboanga, a city of 400,000 some 540 miles south of Manila, was the centre for relief operations. Tidal waves roared more than a quarter-mile inland in places on the Zamboango peninsula and the adjacent southwest coast of Mindanao.

Canada Will Cry Tomorrow

Canadians traditionally pride themselves on thrift, looking askance at the conspicuous consumption of our U.S. neighbors as something slightly sinful or at least in bad taste. In recent years our political leaders have tried to foster frugal thinking, calling for belt-tightening and energy conservation and repeatedly warning us that government can't supply everything. But few Canadians appear to be paying any attention, especially the politicians who are so ready with chapter and verse of hypocritical cant.

The November federal budget gave the economic setting thus: "The Canadian economy has firm underpinnings in consumer buying and capital investment. The real incomes of Canadians continue to improve and employment continues to rise. Unemployment now is lower than a year ago."

All of these statements were true at the time, but let us examine the firm underpinnings of consumer buying. Consumers owed $20.26 billion at the end of June this year, a 17.3 per cent increase in consumer credit over the total a year earlier. Personal chartered bank loans accounted for $14.84 billion of this total. If the banks have restrained their advertisements urging Canadians to buy everything from cars to exotic holidays, consumers are still suckers enough to enjoy now and pay later at usurious interest rates. Being more than $20 billion in hock does not represent "firm underpinnings" in consumer buying.

Capital investment is also showing signs of fright as economic controls cut into profits and interest rates show no signs of declining. Wages have risen dramatically, but so has inflation. Whether the real income of Canadians continues to improve would be a matter of statistical dispute. As for unemployment it is unquestionably higher than one year ago and still rising. Large balance of payments deficits, another indication we are living beyond our means, are here to stay for the forseeable future, according to the Conference Board of Canada. The board claims this suggests two alternatives to policymakers: divert Canadian resources into export production and import substitution or finance deficits by borrowing abroad. Because of the political repercussions governments will probably choose the latter alternative. Quebec's James Bay hydro-electric project will cost $16.2 billion by the time it is finished in 1985. This in a "have-not" province that has just floated a $700 million loan to pay for the Olympics. Even B.C. Hydro talks of capital requirements of $12.8 billion for generation plans between 1975 and 1990. And the proposed Mackenzie pipeline price tag is up to $8.4 billion before one pipe seam has been welded.

But these massive borrowings are only symptoms of an encroaching fatal disease. In a few words, we are trying to keep up with our wealthy neighbors on a fraction of their income. In fact the "neighbors" are ready and willing to lend us ever increasing amounts of money for our next "party." From 1950 to 1974 the total and short term inflow of capital into Canada was $20.3 billing. During the same 25-year period it cost Canadians $40.9 billion to service this foreign investment in terms of interest payments, dividends and other charges. In 1975 that meant an outflow of $6 billion, mainly to the U.S.

The answer to this mounting financial dilemma is not easy. In fact the country probably hasn't the stomach for the purgatives. Clearly, we must limit direct foreign investment, limit United States and other imports and stop spending ourselves into hock. Meanwhile, governments, crown corporations and most Canadian families keep spending as if there is no tomorrow. Perhaps there won't be, at this rate.

Ssh—It's a Secret

The provincial premiers finished their 17th annual conference amid the clear mountain air of Banff, Alta. today and issued a communique couched in bland and uninformative terms.

That's the usual script for these affairs, either exclusively provincial or including Ottawa, which have become in the last three or four years probably the single most important body of government in Canada.

Energy, taxes, the constitution, foreign investment—the deal goes down behind closed doors on all of these and more, with only the premiers, the prime minister and their non-elected and largely anonymous aides and officials present.

This forum is more important than parliament itself, or the provincial legislatures, yet it remains a secret, closed-doors gathering. How cozy, how convenient it must be for the premiers and the prime minister to be able to speak their minds without the great unwashed listening in. The Family Compact must have thought its system ideal, too.

The politicians fear that some of their number will grandstand, act up for the cameras, but Canadians constitute a pretty intelligent electorate. And if rumors of incidents at past conferences are close to the truth, most premiers act the same in private as out front—some blustering, some timid, some obviously out of their depth.

These gatherings should be opened up to press and public. Their present format is anti-democratic. Secret government has no place in a parliamentary democracy.

Ecology Studies

It was a pleasure to read your expression of support for environmental studies in the Puget Sound-Georgia Strait region (Times, Aug. 5). The environmental studies program at UVic has for some years been involved in environmental education, taking the form of courses chosen to augment training in a traditional area of academic study.

Of more direct relevance to your editorial, the university's environmental studies program has participated in the Northwest Association for Environmental Studies, an organization designed to aid program development throughout the B.C.-Washington area by exchange of information concerning curricula and development. I am sure that other member schools of the Northwest Association for Environmental Studies would join us in welcoming UNESCO's contribution to greater co-ordination of effort in dealing with the environmental foundations of our common livelihood.

As I am sure you appreciate, the UNESCO project will not find it easy to avoid an all-too-common academic difficulty — overlaying still another report on a vital problem without coming to grips with the real problem of co-ordinating the human actors involved. It is always easier to study than to solve a problem. Even so, we wish the UNESCO effort well and hope that your paper's interest in environmental studies in Victoria will not end with reporting its existence. We look forward to future contributions your paper may make to the common task of environmental education. — G. R. Walter, Chairman, Environmental Studies, University of Victoria.

Raw milk is safe and nutritious, says environmentalist.

Council's Attitude

It is difficult to comprehend the attitude of some Victoria councillors in their bid to ban the sale of raw milk.

So far, there are no incidences of tuberculosis and other diseases resulting from the consumption of raw milk obtained from local producers who provide milk from healthy animals and under those sanitary conditions approved and inspected by the department of health.

The fact that raw milk retains its total nutritive value as compared with the sterile homogenized version is a valid reason for retaining sources of supply for those who desire to consume raw milk.

This association is aghast that city council appears determined to remove the personal freedom to choose healthy raw milk in preference to pasteurized milk.

If council's attitude over milk is indicative of their interest in health care CASE asks that they extend their concern to cover other aspects, particularly the residues of pesticides, herbicides, antibiotics and hormones in milk and other foods. The incremental addition of these chemicals into the human food chain over many years together with the synergistic effects may well be more harmful to the populace than maintaining a rigid hygienic coccoon of questionable protection.

In the absence of objective validity for their action, CASE calls upon council to revoke its decision. — Derrick Mallard, President, Citizens Association To Save the Environment, 6002 West Saanich Road.

Marvellous Creature

As a subscriber to your well-established newspaper, I would like to point out that the heading and contents of the article Honey's Only Better for Bees, Aug. 11 are at variance with the facts.

I would like to suggest that the writers make an in depth study of the honey bee and apiculture before making misleading statements and thereby misinforming the general public.

Honey belongs to the carbohydrate group of foods and is composed mainly of two invert sugars, namely dextrose and levulose. These are readily absorbed by the human blood stream without requiring the assistance of the salivary, gastric, or intestinal secretions to accomplish the process of inversion. That is why honey is used by athletes because it is the quickest energy producer known to man.

In addition to these two invert sugars honey contains aromatic volatile oils, mineral elements of sodium, potassium, magnesium and many others. (See page 31, Honey and Health by Dr. Bodog F. Beck, M.D.)

As a matter of fact a diet of honey, whole milk and citrus fruit juice will give you all the necessary elements to sustain a healthy body. This has been proven by actual life experience.

I might also add that due to the hygroscopic nature of honey it can be and is used to a large extent in curing certain human diseases.

I could write at further length but trust you will publish my remarks as I champion the cause of that marvellous creature, one of the Creator's greatest gifts to man, the honey bee. — C. Hunsley, 2174 Cadboro Bay Road.

Bleeding Hearts

I feel compelled to comment on the editorial article entitled A Necessary Evil that appeared in your Aug. 16 issue.

It was stated: "More powerful .38-calibre ammunition for the Royal Canadian Mounted Police is sure to raise indignant cries among the citizenry."

These cries, if heard, will most likely come from the same liberal sophisticates who pushed for the abolition of capital punishment.

It wouldn't surprise me to learn that the bleeding hearts, who by abolishing capital punishment have already denied the policeman the protection he deserves, would like to deny him further by obliging him to carry out his duties inadequately armed. — R. Frederick, 1-2924 Qu'Appelle Street.

Deficit Financing

Due to the current economic slowdown the question of deficit financing by the government has been under discussion.

The Social Credit party adopted, on first being elected in 1952, the sound financial policy of balanced budgets using surpluses, if any, to help economic expansion. This worked well while the world economy was expanding but now that it is contracting the question is can deficit financing help towards economic recovery.

Judging by the experience of other governments, particularly Britain, deficit financing has only made economic problems worse with rising unemployment and inflation.

Commercial enterprises use the method to stimulate demand but they know that it must be used with discretion, otherwise mounting debts will result in bankruptcy.

The danger when politicians use the method is that the temptation to use it continuously in order to curry favor with the voters results in rising unemployment and inflation which in the case of Britain has now caused her creditors to give her three months' notice to stop deficit financing or else no more credit! — H. S. Thuillier, 2424 Beach Drive.

Ottawa's Fault

The greater part of the blame for dissatisfaction over the treatment of the veterans must surely go to the federal government because they sloughed off their responsibilities onto the provincial government. The veterans are entirely a federal care, and the B.C. government should never have taken them over.

The Legion must take some of the blame because it did not appeal to the public for support, which they undoubtedly would have had for such an appeal.

As a constant visitor at the veterans' hospital for many years, I have seen that the hospital today is not what it used to be.

For the present, I would suggest that the hospital be divided clearly into two — half for the veterans exclusively, the other half for civilian non-veterans. In that way the veterans might feel that they have a home of their own to come to, and not a mixed-up hodge-podge of accommodation, if they are fortunate enough to be allowed in by the powers that be. — E. W. Abraham, 1125 Faithful Street.

Puzzle Freaks

Maybe you knew what you were doing when you omitted the regular crossword puzzle from the Aug. 15 Times, but unless you are a puzzle freak yourself you could not possibly know how zonked I felt when I could not find it, nor an explanation for its absence. I realize that syndicated material often doesn't show up when due, but a short alibi printed in the space where the puzzle usually appears would provide a bit of balm for the sore spot.

Mind you, the thing is maddening at times, when I can't dope out the definitions, but I look forward to the mental workout just the same.

While I'm at it, a word about the regular crossword puzzle. Lately, someone has had the good sense to put it at the corner of the page, but back about a year ago it would be printed centre-top or centre-bottom or just plain centre-page — the worst of all possible places. Thanks for keeping to the corners, in spite of the fact you cleverly bury it in the classified ads to tempt the puzzlers to read them. — Ed Bryant, 305-1520 Richmond Road.

It's Not All 'Our' Fault

MONTREAL—Some very distinguished analysts have been saying recently that Canada faces one of the most profound crises in recent history because of an apparent backlash on bilingualism which became evident during the dispute on the language of aviation.

Anybody reading French-language dailies here or listening to commentaries might tend to agree. The issue was a contributing factor in the resignation of Jean Marchand from the federal cabinet, an incident which hurt the Liberal government's image here because Marchand was one of its most popular and respected members.

The issue has also seen at least one energetic young Liberal backbencher criticize his peers and leaders, support French-Canadian aviation employees in court and demand whether this stance is sufficient to force his resignation from the Liberal party.

One of this province's most respected pundits, Claude Ryan, publisher of Le Devoir, wrote recently of the danger of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau taking advantage of the current troubled atmosphere to patriate the constitution without Quebec agreement to such a move.

"The best advice we can give at the present time to Mr. Trudeau," he wrote, "is to abstain from all unilateral initiatives which would have no reasonable chance of rallying the opinion of Quebeckers, including that of their legitimate government which is seated at Quebec City.

English Crusader

"Forget about Quebec in this regard for a little . . . For the time being, English Canada is dragging its feet. It is time that leaders rise among the relatively weak English-speaking team of ministers and MPs able to handle more directly this dimension of the problem. This is much more urgent than the patriation of the BNA Act."

It must be difficult for non-Quebecois to take what Ryan describes as an urgent problem seriously. No national political party is against federal bilingualism. Crown corporations, such as Air Canada, have been serving French-speaking customers in French despite the occasional grumbles from Vancouver or Halifax and are slowly meeting the linguistic demands of their French-speaking employees.

The federal government has undertaken to expand the use of bilingual air traffic control facilities if and when an official inquiry decides it is safe to do so.

Statistics indicate that the number of people who are aircraft passengers in this country is relatively small, and the number who are involved in actual flight operations even smaller and, in general, better paid than the average Canadian.

It is hard to see in the attitudes of even the most obdurate members of this relative elite a nation-wide rejection of bilingualism.

Only people who have been reared in the closeness of a ghetto with its attendant hates and fears can feel threatened by an issue like bilingualism in the air.

In fact, a crucial blow to bilingualism has been dealt most recently by the Quebec government's language law, an act criticized occasionally by Trudeau but never strenuously fought by the federal Liberal party or government.

ROBERT BOURASSA
. . . not encouraging bilingualism

It is easy to sympathize with the reasons for passing the Quebec law. French Quebeckers have tended to see themselves as an identifiable nation, isolated on a continent where more than 95 per cent of the inhabitants do not speak their language or share their values.

Others who have shared their communities with them and are still arriving to do so have been treated as foreigners. Until recently, this closed group has been able to maintain some control over its political destiny.

Ryan writes: "This law institutes the primacy of French in the various sectors of collective life, whereas Mr. Trudeau would have hoped to use Quebec bilingualism to justify his own plan of linguistic equality across the country.

"But in fact, bilingualism, in many forms which have become familiar, has never been part of the vocation of Quebec. Quebec is for all intents and purposes except in limited areas of activity and geographic zones a French-speaking territory. That is nearly everything said by this Act 22 which has so apparently indisposed Trudeau."

Ryan is accurate as far as he goes. But he misses some fundamental attitudes voiced in the law which are clearly unacceptable to any liberal-minded person.

The law is not primarily about language. To be considered French-speaking according to the law, it is not sufficient to speak French.

One must have been lucky enough to have chosen a French-speaking mother, or speak French better than any other language.

Beam in Quebec's Eye

Immigrants are not newcomers to Canada, according to the Quebec government, but rather those residents of the province unlucky enough not to have chosen either French-speaking or English-speaking mothers.

Children of such people are denied a bilingual education in the so-called English public school system here and are instead directed to the majority school system which is as successful in training its students to cope in English as the public schools of Ontario or Alberta equip their graduates to live with French.

The response from the Quebec government is that the Parti Quebecois would be even more racist. This is hardly a strong argument in the policy's favor. There must be better ways of achieving the ends proposed by the Quebec Official Language Act.

Surely it is understandable that some people feel current membership in what Bourassa refers to as "the Canadian common market" requires an absence of discrimination in law if not in general attitudes and that if he does not accept such a point of view he should try organizing a common market with the United States.

If Ryan is right in perceiving a major crisis and a need for a credible, strong voice for the defence of bilingualism in English Canada, he and other citizens of this province may have forgotten about the beam in Quebec's eye.

Top Soviet Talent Flees From Control

By DAVID SHIPLER
New York Times

MOSCOW — Bobby Fischer never would have made it as a chess player in the Soviet Union. He is just the kind of person that Soviet officialdom cannot tolerate: temperamental, idiosyncratic, arrogant, impudent. Hardly the type to blend smoothly into the collective. Were he Russian instead of American, his bad manners would probably have kept him out of tournaments long before his talents could have been discovered.

This may seem odd for a country with a compulsion to excel at everything from space shots to water polo. But it is an anomaly of Soviet society that, while devoting great resources to cultivating and pampering star athletes, dancers and musicians, the government is also willing to cast aside fine talent for the sake of political, artistic and behavioral control.

The result has been a flow of Soviet artists and intellectuals to the West through defection, emigration or forced exile. The latest in the series was the chess star, Viktor Korchnoi, who asked for asylum in Amsterdam during a tournament there last month.

Korchnoi is no Bobby Fischer, but he has been too impulsive and outspoken for Moscow's taste. He has not spelled out clearly his reasons for defecting, but he was reported to be fearful that because of his friction with officials, he would not be allowed to travel abroad again.

Foreign travel is one of the main rewards the Soviet government bestows on compliant citizens, and withholding the rirht constitutes a severe punishment for people who thrive on international contacts. This is true not only for chess masters whose medium is international play, but also for painters, sculptors and dancers who often feel starved by the conservative cultural controls in their own country and who need at times to dip into the main currents of artistic innovation of the West.

Such was the case of sculptor Ernst Neizvestny, whose work was denounced with an expletive by Nikita Khrushchev in 1962, but who then gained Khrushchev's admiration by arguing back. Neizvestny counted 50 occasions on which Soviet authorities rejected his applications to visit abroad in response to professional invitations. His most interesting work never received sanction here; officials tried unsuccessfully to throw him out of his workshop last fall. In April, he emigrated to Israel.

Famous dancers, such as Rudolf Nureyev, Natalya Makarova, Mikhail Baryshnikov and Kelerya Fedicheva have described their defections and emigrations to the West as motivated by a desire to escape the artistically stifling atmosphere surrounding dance in Russia. In an interview after arriving in New York last year, Miss Fedicheva indicated that she wanted to dance in modern, Western-style ballets. "We are suffocating from constant management of our minds," she said of the Kirov Ballet Comapny in Leningrad, where she had danced. "There are gray people who are in charge."

Similarly, Mstislav Rostropovich, the cellist, left the Soviet Union in 1974 and has vowed not to return until artistic freedom is fully restored.

That seems unlikely. As acutely embarrassing as the Kremlin must find the defections, its obsession with control remains paramount. Through history, some of the main upheavals of Soviet society have occurred in periods of disorder, and there is no indication that this government is at all tempted to relax its centralized authority over all aspects of life just to woo a few talented people.

If anything, the opposite is the case. Prominent, highly-skilled Jewish scientists, sometimes the heads of prestigious scientific research institutes, have suddenly found themselves demoted or jobless after applying for emigration. Many have been sitting for years without work, their skills of no use to the state, apparently as examples to others who might consider following them.

The Soviet people are usually not told by their official press about prominent figures who emigrate or defect, although ordinary Russians who hear the news by foreign radio or word of mouth often react less with envy than with contempt. When Jewish migration became a major issue here a couple of years ago, the papers carried letters calling for free emigration only with the supreme punishment; that those who leave should never be allowed to return. In this intensely nationalistic country, those who choose to leave the motherland are frequently dismissed as slightly demented, doomed to spiritual drought abroad.

They are also sometimes regarded as greedy and out for personal gain, traits anathema to Soviet ethics, which dictate that in a sense, personal skills are the property of the entire community represented by the state, and personal ambitions must first serve the community's interests, not the individual's.

It is a principle that is not upheld consistently, but the official press is always quick to attack athletes, writers, dancers and others who show signs of becoming infatuated with their stardom. This was the thrust of the Tass attack on Mr. Korchnoi after he defected, although the attack was distributed only abroad, not inside the Soviet Union.

The distaste for personal ambition is so profoundly imbedded in Soviet values that there is even a proverb that describes it, referring to a field of wheat: "Only an empty ear sticks up."

British Class Warfare Stirred Up By Author

By JOHN CORNWELL
London Observer

The blighting disease of class conflict is often held to lie at the root of Britain's economic and social problems nowadays — at least by foreign observers.

But in recent years, much of the heat has gone out of battle of accents, styles of life, and spectrums of privilege, or the lack of it, largely because the more privileged members of British society have avoided open conflict. The uneasy truce, however, now seems at risk.

In the coming weeks the British public will be treated to the extraordinary spectacle of the late Evelyn Waugh's son, Auberon, inciting the "working classes" during prime television time.

Evelyn Waugh, who devoted much of his life to exploiting the rich potential of British class consciousness in his novels, was a self-styled country gentleman with a horror of social mobility, not to mention the working man.

'Hard Luck'

Now Auberon, mostly bald at 36 years of age, and dressed in an ill-fitting tweed coat, has made his TV debut (the first of a series, in which he discusses the class war), boasting about how lucky he is to live in a grand house "which costs as much to heat as most people earn in a year." If people are envious, he quips pleasantly, "it's hard luck on them."

After showing off his house with its various pleasure gardens and forbidding outer gates, he embarks on a trip to the impoverished North of England to tour, with fastidious distaste, a number of dilapidated apartment blocks where even the homeless refuse to live. "Anti-social behavior creates bad housing," hazards the young Waugh ". . . it's the attitude of the people who live here that makes them uninhabitable."

After sneering at a group of dockworkers — they dared to say that the unions gave them strength — Waugh announces solemnly: "What's needed is a bit of self-discipline."

Next he taunts a group of unemployed men in a public bar. While smoking their cigarettes, he quells them roundly by telling them how much better off he is than they are.

Back at his country mansion, he breathes a sigh of relief and comments in the tranquility of his rose garden: "The class divisions give Britain its particularly obnoxious aspect nowadays."

Auberon Waugh has written over the past decade for several prominent journals — the New Statesman, the Spectator, and Private Eye — the satirical magazine whose editor faces a jail sentence on a charge of alleged criminal libel due to be tried shortly.

The main burden of Waugh's social commentary is summed up in a recent article in the Spectator, where he argues: "Those characteristics which might be singled out as being determinant of working class status — incompetence, stupidity, ignorance, lack of organizational ability or initiative, a sort of brutal timidity and collective moral shortsightedness — are not such as inspire confidence in the sort of society they will create."

The young generation, educated in state schools, he judges to be "wet, ignorant, silent and incurious welfare fodder," while left-wing radicals are dismissed as being "of limited intelligence . . . with their staring eyes and fanatical white faces . . ."

Skewers Royalty

Waugh's targets include not only the "working classes" with their "repulsive appetites" (a favourite epithet of his), but all those guilty of the slightest vulgarity, including the entire Royal Family, who being "German" are naturally beyond the pale of decency, and their various consorts: Princess Anne's husband, Captain Mark Phillips, is a "grinning, speechless stable lad," and the Duke of Edinburgh, while grudgingly allowed some intelligence, is of inexcusable "rude, moronic exterior."

Waugh's weekly diatribes in print could be dismissed as symptomatic of the conservative lunatic fringe, if it were not for the fact that he has emerged as one of the most popular and widely discussed journalists in Britain today.

While his views are unvaryingly inflammatory, outrageous and pessimistic, he is generally held to be one of the funniest writers in the business.

He is categorized as a satirist, which is the reading public's alibi (on both sides of the political divide) for laughing with him. The curious thing is, however, that he appears to believe everything he says.

There are various theories as to what Auberon Waugh is up to. There are those who believe him to be a serious champion of social democracy battling like some latter day Orwell against the forces of totalitarianism. Others think of him as a crypto-Marxist, reducing right-wing views to absurdity by carrying them to the extreme.

Backlash Sought

What does seem clear is that he is trying to provoke a response in a generally apathetic political scene. In a democracy, he said recently, "majority standards, unfortunately, have to prevail. But even if you are only a small voice pointing out that majority standards aren't necessarily the best, it's worth doing."

The television network that is showing his programs seems to be prepared for a terrific backlash. His first appearance on the screen was preceded by the warning: "In the program that follows, writer Auberon Waugh expresses a personal view." And at the end there was a further disclaimer: "In the program you have just seen, writer Auberon Waugh was expressing a personal view."

But if the victims of Waugh's diatribes in the first programs were anything to go by there was little basis for concern. The more he baited, the more they smiled (albeit nervously) and shrugged. Confronting a group of brawny dockers he actually has the gall to say, reeling backwards, "You are going to make me sick." But the harder he worked, the more politely he was received.

Perhaps, after all, the British class war has been fought, and won by the working man — who no longer feels vulnerable to the attitudes of the old ruling classes. All the same, Waugh's opening program was a searing reminder that there are still two nations in Britain: one of enormous privilege and comfort, and the other of appalling squalor and distress. By demonstrating the mild acceptance of that division, he has made an important statement.

A Chance to Save Some Real Money?

By TOM SLOAN
The Globe and Mail

OTTAWA — I have a modest proposal to make to the federal government and in particular to its Minister of Supply and Services, Jean Pierre Goyer. It's in response to an overly modest decision announced by Mr. Goyer the other day on behalf of the cabinet to close down all the government bookstores across the country in order to save money.

These are the places where ordinary Canadians can browse and buy government publications of all sorts, ranging from reports and background studies in a host of policy fields to maps and atlases and books on birds.

In short, while it doesn't draw the crowds of your average adult book emporium on the Yonge Street strip, the government bookstore does offer a wide assortment of literature. It may not sell Playboy but it is a vital link in the information chain every good society should have.

So how much will its demise save the Canadian taxpayer? Not a great deal. There are, after all, only six of them across the country, with a total of 47 employees.

In his press release announcing the action, Mr. Goyer says that "it would cost Canadians close to a million dollars this year to keep the stores open." That's about the cost of one twentieth of one Orion patrol plane — say, the engine. And then Mr. Goyer says that every effort will be made to keep the displaced employees in the government service. Perhaps we're talking about one-fortieth of an airplane, or perhaps half a tank.

Now to my own modest proposal. Impressed as I am with the government's concern about money, I'm sure there is much more it could do, even within this very same Department of Supply and Services.

After all, once the department has rid itself of these nuisance retail outlets which are the only places the public can go to look at, touch and even pay cash for the full range of government publications, why not go a step further and save some real money? There are dozens, if not hundreds of things that the government could stop publishing altogether.

What about some of those stuffy background studies to the Science or Economic Council reports, for example. After all, their only function is to show some of the reasoning behind these bodies' proposals and to stimulate thinking on these topics.

I do not propose a total ban on government publications. Members of Parliament, being a cranky breed, will insist on seeing departmental reports. The Economic Council would be most upset and members might even resign en masse if its reports weren't published, and the Canada Year Book keeps the statisticians busy all year.

A number of other documents would have to be published for the parliamentarians, the Press Gallery and the National Archives, but they could be limited in distribution and their existence could be publicly ignored if not actually denied by some judicious cataloguing practices.

If, in spite of all this, some members of the public discovered their existence and expressed interest, they could be offered mimeographed copies at a price outrageous enough to discourage further curiosity.

That's the way to save real money — perhaps the equivalent of a whole patrol plane. Maybe two.

What price feedom of information? What price easy public accessibility to information about government activities? Mr. Goyer answers: "For them (the bookstores) to remain open and continue to run at a loss would be unacceptable in a period of general government restraint."

Butterflies and Toads in Loo

By PATRICK O'DONOVAN
London Observer

There are toads at the bottom of our garden. And I wish they would stay there. Though not physically beautiful in any conventional sense, they have a certain mottled and nobbly green splendor that puts them above frogs. Alas, they have now chosen to live in the outside lavatory and occasionally within the house—where it is reasonably cool.

It is strange to find a toad early in the morning sitting patiently at the French window, waiting to be let out. It surprises visitors when one moves slowly across the carpet on some private business. But since I live more or less in the country, there are no piercing screams and everyone knows they have taken to visiting us because of the strangeness of the English weather.

For we are only now beginning to come out of the worst heatwave this country has known for some 250 years. The accepted number of years is purely arbitrary. But all the records have been burst. England, in theory that soft place of streams and water meadows, of mists and soft showers of rain, has been turned into a passable imitation of Washington in high summer or Bengal before the monsoons. And as usual we have been astonished by and unprepared for our own weather.

In wartime we excel at improvization and, rather unfairly, have survived a long list of defeats to which we are emotionally attached. But our own reasonably moderate weather, year after year, invariably takes us by surprise. Small wonder that we talk about it so much.

But this summer's heat, with its attendant drought, has been phenomenal. It has had some good effects. No one can remember so many butterflies, some of them of extreme rarity. There has been a plague of ladybirds, our only popular form of beetle. It has given people feeling the financial pinch a good public excuse not to be going to the South of France this year. It's been good for onions. It has been marvellous for the soft drink trade. And that is about all.

The weather has, in fact, been in the proportion of a disaster. Things like forests and heaths have kept catching fire. There has been so little rain that some canals have become unusable. Just before the Railway Age in the last century, when Britain really changed the nature of life by its development of the locomotive and the permanent way, there was a brief Canal Age when Britain was criss-crossed with artificial waterways and studded with locks. These have small commercial value now, but are an infinite source of holiday pleasure—even if they do drown small children too frequently for comfort. But they are drying up and some may never be usable again.

The agricultural cost has been enormous. Ears of wheat are small and few. Peas hardly got going. Barley for beer-making has taken a sad beating. The food we feed our cattle in the autumn and winter—kale, a sort of cow cabbage and turnips—has hardly moved. It looks as if the government does not know what will hit us in September. And since much the same has happened in Western Europe, alternative sources of supply will not be easy to come by.

But, even in wartime, when every inch of spare ground seemed to enshrine its carrot or potato and flowers became a shocking self-indulgence. Britain was not a country that could feed itself. It also has a farm-owning or farm-leasing population that is utterly incapable of optimism, that behaves like a mass of penitent monks forever bewailing the anger of God expressed in nature. The non-farmer finds it surprising that those mourning men survive, drive rich cars and offer one another deep drinks on market days. But they do.

Airline Pushing Computer

MONTREAL (CP) — A senior Air Canada executive says the federal government could be more active on a diplomatic level in helping the airline export its world-renowned computer expertise.

Several potential agreements linking Air Canada's computer system to foreign airlines have failed because of lobbying by the governments of other countries, Anne Bodnarchuk, new senior director of computer and systems services, said in an interview.

Airline computer expertise has become like traditional commodities for export, with sales negotiated at a bilaterial government level, Miss Bodnarchuk said.

A year ago, Miss Bodnarchuk's predecessor boasted that British Caledonian Airways Ltd. and the national carriers of Saudia Arabia, Czechoslovakia and Turkey were interested in purchasing Air Canada's computer expertise. However, none of the deals worked out.

Pierre Jeanniot, now vice-president eastern region, had termed the potential sales of Air Canada's computer expertise "an interesting source of revenue" for an airline that has produced two consecutive annual deficits and appears headed for a third.

Air Canada had lost to Air France a potentially lucrative deal with the Soviet Union because of lobbying efforts by the French government, said Miss Bodnarchuk, a 17-year veteran of the airline.

A potential deal with a Venezuelan airline was also lost because of aggressive tactics by the Dutch government, she said, hinting that oil sales may have been part of the contract.

Undaunted, Air Canada, is still trying to corner deals with Quebecair and Air Algeria.

Air Jamaica, Pacific Western Airlines, Eastern Provincial Airways, Transair and the national defence department have become involved so far in computer sharing agreements with Air Canada.

During the past year, Air Canada has also boosted its computer links with travel agents. About 250 agencies in Canada will be able to make plane reservations directly from their offices by the end of 1976.

Soon, the airline plans to install automatic ticket printers at the travel agencies.

As computer technology advances, Air Canada hopes to extend its computers into other services, to cut costs or increase speed.

Miss Bodnarchuk said she can see the day when people will be able to make reservations through a video display terminal in their homes, although the idea was still considered "futuristic."

The Gronlid, Sask., native is touted as Air Canada's highest ranking female executive. She is also bilingual.

Miss Bodnarchuk, who started as a junior statistician in the maintenance department, is unsure where the next promotion will take her, but said that she hopes to become more involved in other levels of the company, such as marketing, finance and corporate planning.

New York Lists Bell Canada

NEW YORK (CP) — Shares of Bell Canada were listed on the New York Stock Exchange for the first time Wednesday.

A. Jean de Grandpre, Bell chairman, bought the first 100 shares for $48 a share.

Bell listed 39,963,687 shares on the exchange and was assigned the ticker symbol BCA.

De Grandpre and other company executives attended brief ceremonies on the exchange floor to mark the listing.

De Grandpre said the New York listing would provide U.S. shareholders with a more available market place and give Bell "a further presence in the major international capital markets."

Bell is listed on the Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver stock exchanges in Canada, as well as on exchanges in London, Brussels, Paris, Frankfurt, Duseldorf, Zurich, Basle, Geneva and Amsterdam.

With assets of more than $6.5 billion at the end of 1975, Bell Canada and its affiliate companies represent Canada's largest industrial entity and are the largest suppliers of telecommunication services and equipment in Canada.

ARCTIC WILDCAT PERMIT SOUGHT

CALGARY (CP) — Norlands Petroleums Ltd. of Calgary hopes to drill the first deep off-shore wildcat well in Lancaster Sound off the south coast of Devon Island in the arctic islands in the summer of 1977.

J. T. Raleigh, company president, says the well, aiming at a potentially large geological structure in 2,500 feet of water, will be the first off-shore well in eastern Arctic waters.

Norlands, a subsidiary of Northern Natural Gas Co. of Omaha, Neb., has been laying the groundwork for the wildcat for more than five years and has received approval-in-principle from the federal government.

Located on an acreage held by Magnorth Petroleum Ltd. of Calgary, the well is part of a commmitment between Norlands and Magnorth that will earn Norlands a 25-per cent working interest in Magnorth's 13.9 million permit acres.

Raleigh said his company hopes to complete negotiations this summer for the use of two ice strengthened vessels to drill in Lancaster Sound.

"We know it is feasible to drill in this water depth," said Albert Rutgers, Norlands exploration vice-president, adding that the ice conditions in Lancaster sound are less of a threat to drilling than Beaufort Sea in the Western Beautfort Sea in the Western Arctic.

Canmar Drilling Ltd., a subsidiary of Dome Petroleum Ltd. of Calgary, is drilling in the Beafort Sea this summer.

"Drilling costs will be comparable to an East Coast offshore well and significantly lower than a Beaufort well," Raleigh said.

Indian Fined $150 Over Rotten Meat

WHITEHORSE — A member of the Whitehorse indian band was fined $150 in magistrate's court Thursday for allowing moose meat that was fit for human consumption to rot and spoil.

Court was told that a substantial amount of meat from a cow moose and calf was left to rot by Tom-Tom after he shot the animals Feb. 22 near a rail line about 20 miles southwest of here.

The defence argued that as a status Indian, Tom-Tom was not subject to territorial game laws.

In his judgment, O'Connnor said he felt the ordinance did not apply because of an earlier decision in the Supreme Court of Canada which dealt with an Indian who contravened game laws in the adjacent Northwest Territories.

EDMONTON — Dorothy Baker, 41, was a bit upset when she got an early-morning telephone call Thursday — a day off from her job as an airline passenger agent.

She wasn't upset for long. The 8 a.m. call was good news — she had won $25,000 in a Western Canada Lottery draw.

The draw was held Aug. 4 in Victoria but no one had been able to get hold of Dorothy because she was on vacation.

Miss Baker was on a flight to Winnipeg 3½ hours after being told she was a winner.

GREATEST challenge of his career is the way Gregory Peck (above) described his role of Gen. Douglas MacArthur in the film of the same name now being produced.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Fred Astaire has broken his wrist. The 77-year-old entertainer, a symbol of grace for five decades, fell off his skateboard, a spokesman for Golden Films said Thursday.

Astaire, who completed a role in "The Amazing Dobermans" for Golden Films Monday, fell off the skateboard while exercising in the courtyard of his home Tuesday, he said.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio — Mrs. James Pascarella said she tried to sell one of her husband's old coats at an auction, and when no one would buy it she gave it to the Salvation Army.

A few days ago, Pascarella started looking for his coat. He told his wife he had stashed $250 in it, putting the cash away for a surprise vacation.

The Salvation Army said its workers spent two days sifting through three tons of clothing looking for Pascarella's old coat.

On the third day, the coat and the money were found, and Mrs. Pascarella will get her surprise vacation. They're leaving Sunday.

VIENNA — Actor Richard Burton has told his former wife Elizabeth Taylor he plans to marry Susie Hunt "within a few weeks," the newspaper Die Presse said Thursday.

"Richard called me here in Vienna to tell me it will happen in the next few weeks," the paper quoted Miss Taylor as saying.

HAPPY WITH TRASHY PAY

"Say the man takes a shine to someone else and moves out," he said. "Often as not the woman flies into a rage, loads up all his stuff and carts it off to the dump without even sorting though it to see what's there. Right then I'm liable to get a new wardrobe and all the trimmings." Wilson says he's amazed by citizens' wasteful habits.

"It's fantastic what people throw away. Anywhere else in the world, people would save and reuse most of the things that are tossed in the dump here."

But there's more. The list includes new $50 bedspreads, a Pendleton blanket with a $113 price tag still attached.

THEY'RE RETRACING GRAND-DAD'S PATH

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A Kitimat man is trying to retrace the footsteps of his grandfather through a wild, rocky mountain pass 100 miles northeast of here.

Wayne Monkman, however, is not making the trip through the 3,500-high Monkman Pass on foot as his grandfather, Alex, did in 1938. He's using a convoy of four-wheel drive vehicles.

Monkman, 30 his wife, Sheila, seven Kitimat men and four vehicles hope to make the 70-mile trip from McGregor on the Fraser River to Kinuseo Falls on the Murray River on the prairie side of the mountains in about three weeks.

The expedition includes about 30 miles of trackless wilderness where the group will have to create a four-wheel-drive trail.

Monkman says he wants to go through the pass to keep up the family tradition.

"It's a challenge; people say you can't make it," he said as the four vehicles stopped here for supplies.

The other members of the expedition, Kieran and Paul Bozman, Ed Powell, Alfie Poellot, Duane Herbert, John Pozsgay and Everett Harvey say they provide the manpower to create passable track out of the wilderness.

They went through the rugged Telkwa Pass between Terrace and Smithers in 1974 because it was an adventure and Monkman's connection with the Rocky Mountain pass of his grandfather made it their next target.

Canadian Seiners Seized

SEATTLE (AP) — Two Canadian fishing vessels seized off Point Roberts Wednesday for allegedly salmon fishing in U.S. territorial waters have been turned over to the U.S. marshal, the Coast Guard said Thursday.

A Coast Guard spokesman said the seiners are the 60-foot Sea Luck, skippered by Robert Recahlmia of Richmond, and the 80-foot Attu, whose captain is George Arnet of North Vancouver.

The vessels were spotted about 5½ miles west of Point Roberts, said the Coast Guard.

Conviction of fishing within U.S. limits could mean forfeiture of the vessels and cargoes, and the masters could be fined a maximum of $100,000 or a year in jail or both.

North Coast Subsidy Cut

DAVIS

Transport Minister Jack Davis said Thursday that he is not happy with Ottawa's move to cut the $4 million steamship susdidy to Northland Shipping for its service to isolated ports on the B.C. coast.

Davis said the federal government spends tens of millions of dollars each year supporting shipping, ferry and other services on the east coast and to cut out the remaining subsidy to the west coast is a travesty.

He said the province is working to ensure that cargo and passenger service to these ports is maintained, but it will only act in conjunction with Ottawa, not on its own.

The minister said he is in consultation with the federal transport minister on the matter.

The shipping company has warned it may soon have to scrap the service because of Ottawa's decision to end the subsidy.

The company may even be forced out of business.

"It is obviously going to mean severe hardship to many of the communities and possibly to many of our 340 employees," said the Northland president Capt. Louis Fleming.

"We are shocked by the arbitrary manner in which the decision was reached. There has been no discussion with us or with any of the communities affected."

The company, previously known as B.C. Steamships, has been providing scheduled cargo and passenger services to the communities for more than 34 years. It has virtually no other operations.

The communities mainly serve the mining, logging and fishing industries and range, as far north as the Queen Charlotte Islands. Populations number from a few dozen to 3,000 or more.

The company said it is looking at possible alternatives but warned that shipping rates without the $312,000-a-month subsidy would be "prohibitive."

Many of the communities are without highway access and cannot rely on regular air services because of bad weather.

Poor Tires, Radio Mixup Led to Crash, Inquest Told

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Communications problems and poor tires on a police cruiser contributed to a fatal crash in June, a coroner's inquest was told Thursday.

Victor Buchanan, 80, of McCreary, Man., died of massive chest injuries and internal bleeding suffered when the small foreign compact car in which he was riding was struck by an unmarked RCMP cruiser June 14. Arleigh McLean of Coquitlam, and driver of the car, suffered minor injuries.

Cpl. Steve Melanson testified Thursday that Const. Wijtze Van der Veer, in the unmarked cruiser, was using Channel 2 of a six-channel network when he was passed by a white car.

The driver of the white car, an undercover RCMP officer engaged in narcotics surveillance, attempted to contact Const. Van der Veer using channel 4, the corporal testified.

Cpl. Melanson said that the new radio system had been installed in Coquitlam RCMP headquarters in late May and early June.

He said that Const. Van der Veer gave chase for about two blocks before his cruiser slide sideways into the oncoming McLean car. The left side of the police cruiser hit the front of the McLean car, which was travelling at five to 10 m.p.h.

Gordon Zeigler, owner of the Apple Valley Parks, wants to convert his 4.6-acre site into a commercial venture and has given residents until Oct. 31 to vacate. Nelson Wild, spokesman for the Mobile Home Owners Association said Thursday the eviction notice is not long enough and there should be some compensation for relocation.

Tractor Kills Tot

LYTTON (CP) — Merrill Yuan Mundall, 3, of Lytton, was killed Wednesday when he fell from a tractor driven by his father and was crushed by its wheels, RCMP said Thursday.

Swedish Girl Can Go Home

VANCOUVER (UPI) — A Canadian judge granted the wish of a 16-year-old Swedish schoolgirl Thursday despite her mother's pleas and ordered her returned to the custody of her father in Sweden.

The girl, blonde Laila Bondesson, will remain in the care of B.C. child welfire authorities until she is placed on a plane for Stockholm.

The mother, Norwegian-born Bjorg Madsen, who is now the wife of a prosperous Vancouver marine dealer, contended she would be able to give her daughter a better life in Canada.

After a one-hour family court hearing, Judge Harry Boyle upheld a Swedish court order granting custody to the father, Hans Erik Bondesson of the Bromolla area of southern Sweden.

The girl, who appeared in court wearing a white T-shirt with the word Laila in large black letters across the chest, arrived in Canada June 30 for a 26-day visit.

But she missed the plane back, apparently because of a delay caused by her mother.

VICTOR DAILYDE

Teacher Awarded B.C. Prize

Six years of teaching during the day, attending university classes in the evening and then studying, sometimes until 4 a.m., has paid off for Victor Dailyde.

The dedicated teacher-student was awarded his Masters degree from the University of Victoria at the spring convocations, and then learned last week his graduate thesis on the history of British Columbia was judged best in the province.

Dailyde was awarded the $300 Leon J. Ladner B.C. History Scholarship for his thesis on the administration of W. J. Bowser, the premier of B.C. for nine months in 1915-16.

Much of Dailyde's thesis background was of original research because Bowser's family has not allowed the release of his private papers.

Dailyde, of 540 Beach Drive, will continue teaching at Uplands Elementary school, but right now he's enjoying his first summer off in eight years.

Summer school occupied all the previous ones.

Mt. Newton Graduates To Return

Former students and teachers of Mount Newton High School will go on a nostalgia trip Sept. 17-18 when the school holds its first reunion.

The two-day affair is open to those who were at the school from 1932 to 1952 when Mount Newton became a junior secondary institution.

The reunion starts on the Friday with a wine and cheese party in the school gymnasium from 8 to 11 p.m.

The next day there will be an outdoor pancake breakfast on the school grounds from 10 a.m. to noon.

During the day there will be an open house, sports events and other activities. Food concessions will be manned in the school and on the grounds from noon to 5 p.m.

The final event will be a dance and social at the Brentwood Community Hall from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Frank Preston, chairman of the reunion committee, stresses that former students do not have to be graduates to take part in the festivities.

"Everyone who was involved during the high school years is welcome."

The cost of the reunion is $10 per person.

Others on the committee are Marilyn Hinchcliffe, Bob Jones, Albert Hafer, Bob Lee, Earl Marshall, Thelma McCullough, Rosemary McGillis, George Preston, Vivian Rees, Nancy Sing, Peter Westoby and school principal A. Vogee.

Invitations will be sent to people who have been located but Mrs. Lee is hoping any not yet contacted will register as soon as possible.

CP Talks Continue

Previous talks broke down July 28 on a variety of issues ranging from severance and dismissal pay to grievance procedures, hours of work and the open shop.

Discussion will continue today.

Guild spokesman Jerry MacDonald said that the issue of union security remains the major stumbling block.

MacDonald added in an interview that negotiations would be discontinued and rotating work stoppages resumed if no progress is made in the talks today.

Bobby Orr's Back And Team Is Glad

MONTREAL (CP) — Bobby Orr has come back to Team Canada and the hockey team's coaches and his team-mates are glad he did.

"We certainly feel he wasn't out of place there," coach Bobby Kromm said Thursday.

"On his first day back, he assisted on the winning goal in the scrimmage.

"Twice today he got caught up and twice he came back like gangbusters. We have had guys here for almost two weeks who haven't come back like that."

Scotty Bowman, who along with Kromm, Don Cherry and Al MacNeil, is coaching the Canadian team in this fall's Canada Cup international tournament, said Orr "was in top shape."

"I think everybody had been anticipating his arrival," said Bowman. "We figured he was right on schedule. He had some commitments to his doctors on a training program. They was no percentage in rushing him."

Orr, who signed a multi-year, $3-million contrct with Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League this summer after 10 seasons as a member of Boston Bruins, had his oft-injured left knee examined Thursday by Dr. John Palmer in Toronto.

Orr underwent surgery on the knee for the fifth time last winter and played only 10 games for the Bruins. The workout Thursday marked the first full-scale scrimmage for him since last November.

"There was a little soreness," Orr admitted. "It's going to be there. But I'm very happy to be here.

"I've been working out. I've been doing a few sprints at my hockey camp. When I came here I wanted to be able to scrimmage. I can skate by myself all I want, but there's no way I'm going to get into shape. You have to get out and play against the other guys."

Orr said his wind was a little short, but he was satisfied with his over-all effort in Thursday's workout.

Team Canada has an intra-squad game set for Monday night and then the club will go to Quebec to meet Team U.S.A. Tuesday and Wednesday.

Harris, Barrow Picked for Hall

HAMILTON (CP) — Four former players—including John Barrow, Wayne Harris and Bob Simpson—and builder Harry Spring were named today as inductees to the Canadian Football Hall of Fame.

The other player chosen by the Canadian Football League's selection committee is the late Chester McCance, who played for Winnipeg Blue Bombers and Montreal Alouettes.

Ald. Reg Wheeler of Hamilton, chairman of the Hall of Fame, said the five will be enshrined in ceremonies at the 1976 induction dinner here Nov. 7 after a game between Toronto Argonauts and Hamilton Tiger Cats.

Barrow was an outstanding lineman with Hamilton, Harris starred as a middle linebacker for Calgary Stampeders, and Simpson played a number of positions with Ottawa Rough Riders.

Spring, from Moose Jaw, Sask., served as chairman of a group in 1951 that laid the groundwork for a Vancouver franchise in the Western Conference of the CFL. An original director of British Columbia Lions, he was treasurer of the club in 1955 and 1956, vice-president in 1957 and president the next two years.

Barrow was an all-American from the University of Florida who signed with Hamilton in 1957.

In his 14-year career with Hamilton, Barrow was voted an all star 16 times. For four consecutive years from 1957 to 1960, he was an all-star tackle on offence and defence.

He also spent four years as managing director of Toronto Argonauts.

When Harris left the Stampeders after a 12-year career, his sweater number—55—was retired. He was a Western Conference all-star at middle linebacker for 11 consecutive seasons.

Harris, who attended Arkansas University, was voted all-Canadian in eight of his 11 seasons.

Simpson, a Windsor, Ont., native, who retired in 1962, was captain of the Rough Riders from 1956 to 1962. He was voted to all-star teams eight times, not only as offensive end but as an offensive and defensive back.

McCance played junior football in Winnipeg before joining the Blue Bombers in 1937. He was a two-way end, and was voted Western Conference all-star in 1940 and 1941.

Stephen Second

WINNIPEG — Robert Stephen of Victoria finished second in the Mayleigh Cup match with 283 points out of a possible 300 at the Canadian handgun championships here Thursday.

He finished three points behind winner Tom Guinn of Windsor, Ont.

New Heroes Lift Macs

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

There's one nice things about playoffs. Often-neglected individuals step forward with performances that help point out their true value to a team.

Take, for example, the likes of Ken King, Doug Angrove, Dave Lowdon and, to a lesser degree, Scott Browning and Jim Boyd.

Their contributions Thursday were some of the important reasons why Victoria McDonald's are still very much alive in the Western Canada Major Junior Lacrosse League playoffs.

McDonalds, getting back to their favorite style of play, defeated New Westminster Salmonbellies 15-6 at Esquimalt's Sports Centre to force a sixth game in their best-of-seven semi-final. Salmonbellies still lead the series, 3-2.

Game No. 6 will be played in New Westminster tonight and if Victoria's juniors can repeat Thursday's good performance, then the seventh and deciding game will be played at the Sports Centre on Sunday.

Until Thursday, things hadn't turned out quite the way Victoria coaches Bill Munroe and Barry Forbes had wished. Beset by a rash of injuries, including a worrisome one to scoring kingpin Kevin Alexander, the Bakers found themselves trailing 3-1 in the series.

Not all the McDonald players are healthy. Goalie Roy Sinden is out for the season with a broken hand, and Alexander is still in the recuperating stage. In addition, Steve Buckley (ankle), Kevin Kennedy (ribs) and King (elbow) can be excused if they don't operate at top efficiency.

That' why Forbes and Munroe are pleased with the efforts of King, Angrove, Lowdon, Browning, Boyd and the rest.

For most of the regular season, it was almost impossible to keep the glory from Alexander and captain Bob Cool. In game after game, their scoring feats helped rewrite the record book.

Cool, with three goals and a pair of assists, stood out Thursday. Alexander scored twice and set up three tallies in the first two periods, then was wisely rested once Bakers had assumed command of the game.

But "the rest" also pumped hard, and rate more than passing mention.

Lowdon didn't score, but nonetheless figured prominently in the victory. He was assigned to shadow Mario Govorchin, and did the job extremely well. Govorchin, a thorn in Victoria's side earlier in the series, managed only one goal and one assist.

Because of the "slight shoulder separation" suffered by Alexander, King was pushed into playing the power play point for the first time in three years. Victoria's power play didn't suffer, as witnessed by King's one-goal, three-assist night.

King also worked hard in picking up loose balls and he checked strongly.

Angrove is another whose worth won't be found in the scoring statistics. He went pointless but the recruit from Esquimalt's junior "B" team added important value with his speed and checking talents.

Behind them all was Al Radley. Victoria's goalkeeper had a 41-stop performance but was especially effective when it counted. He was solid in the first period but at his best in the second when the Bakers finally pulled away.

Ahead 4-3 after the first, Bakers, thanks to Radley, outscored Salmonbellies 5-1 in the second. There wasn't much doubt after that.

Forbes found technical delight in Victoria's defence.

"The defence was tough," he said. "And our offense goes if we play good defence. We got back to our game . . . running . . . instead of playing New Westminster's game."

Final Starts On Saturday

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Western Lacrosse Association final between New Westminister Salmonbellies and Vancouver Burrards begins Saturday at New Westminster, association commissioner Roy Burton announced Thursday.

Burton said games in Vancouver are scheduled for Aug. 23, Aug. 28 and Sept. 2, while New Westminster's home games are Aug. 26, Aug. 31 and Sept. 4.

The best-of-seven series will decide the western representative for the Mann Cup final which Vancouver won last year.

West, 38, spent 14 seasons with the Lakers, who made 14 consecutive playoff appearances and won the championship in 1972.

Oilers in Trouble

EDMONTON (CP) — The future of Edmonton Oilers of the World Hockey Association seemed bleak Thursday after team owner Dr. Charles Allard withdrew his last offer to lease the Coliseum for next season.

"We requested the Edmonton) Exhibition Association to assign a lease to Edmonton Video Ltd. but they refused to do so," said Allard, who took over ownership of the struggling club at a WHA trustees meeting in Toronto Aug. 9.

At the time, ownership of the team was transferred from Edmonton World Hockey Enterprises to Edmonton Video Ltd.

"It (the transfer) was conditional, however, on our obtaining a transfer of lease from the exhibition association," said Allard, head of the Allarco conglomerate.

"I'm pulling that offer out now . . . it was a last-ditch effort to keep pro hockey here. We will advise the league that Edmonton Video Ltd. won't accept the transfer of franchise because we couldn't get an assignment of lease."

The franchise now reverts to the previous owners — Dr. Allard, Zane Feldman and former general manager Bill Hunter. But this group has said it does not have the necessary capital to operate the team.

DALE SHAW

DALE OUT OF TOURNEY AFTER EXTRA-HOLE DUEL

SACRAMENTO — Dale Shaw of Victoria saw her hopes of winning the U.S. Open women's championship go down the drain Thursday — but not without a marathon struggle.

Miss Shaw, who was picked as the outstanding female golfer in Canada last year, became one of the favorites here after defeating defending-champion Beth Daniels in a first-round match on Thursday.

She then went on to win a second-round match and reached the quarter-finals by beating Cookie English of Indianapolis 2 and 1 on Thursday morning.

In the afternoon, however, Miss Shaw ran into trouble and bowed out on the fourth extra hole to Rise Alexander of Gresham, Ore.

Miss Alexander, a senior at Oregon State, advanced to meet Marianne Bretton, a UCLA student from San Diego, in one of the semi-final matches scheduled for today. Donna Horton of Jacksonville, Fla., and Pat Cornett of Salenas, Calif., were to meet in the other semi-final.

Miss Bretton, conqueror of 1973 champ Carol Semple on Wednesday, beat 1972 winner Mary Budke of Oregon 5 and 4 Thursday before posting a 1-up victory against Miss Lopez, national collegiate champion from Tulsa University.

Miss Cornett won the longest match of the tournament with a birdie on the 23rd hole Thursday morning against Lauren Howe of Colorado Springs then beat Patty Sheehan of Reno, Nev., 2-up in the quarter-finals.

Miss Horton beat Curtis Cup veteran and Canadian women's amateur champion Debbie Massey of Bethlehem, Pa., in the quarter-finals.

Fun for Nostalgia Gang

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Pro golf's nostalgia buffs were in their glory.

There was Sam Snead, 64, one-putting nine times from his side-saddle stance and chortling: "If I could keep this up, they might be able to coax me back to the tour."

Snead converted his best putting round in years into a 68. That was just three strokes off the pace of Rik Massengale, a 29-year-old Texan, whose six-under-par 65 was all but overshadowed by the heroics of another generation of golfing greats Thursday in the first round of the $210,000 Greater Hartford Open tournament.

There was Arnold Palmer, 46, a winner of this tournament 20 years ago, bringing home a 68.

There was Art Wall, 52, a winner here a decade ago, moving into a tie for second with a 67 despite a bogey on the final hole.

And there was Billy Casper, 45, who had a 67 that included two putts of 35 to 40 feet in length and three more from about 15 feet.

"It's been a long time since I had a round like this," said Billy, who won the first of his four Hartford titles 13 years ago.

Wall and Casper were tied for second two strokes off the pace with J. C. Snead, Sam's nephew, and Chi Chi Rodriguez, himself 40 years old.

The large group with Snead and Palmer at 68 included Lee Trevino, Homero Blancas, Jim Colbert, Mac McLendon, Tom Jenkins, Jim Wiechers, Bobby Wadkins and Dave Lind.

Hubert Green, a three-time winner this year, shot a 70. So did Al Geiberger. Defending champ Don Bies shot 72. Masters king Ray Floyd must improve from a 73 if he is to make the cut for the final two rounds. And Dave Stockton, the newlycrowned PGA king, blew to a 76.

TEAM TENNIS GAINS

NEW YORK (UPI) — World Team Tennis announced Thursday the league attendance reached a record 883,144 spectators for the recently completed season, representing a 32 per cent increase over 1975. The figures average out to 4033 fans a game for the 219 matches. Last season, the league drew 503,858 for 165 playing dates, an average of 3053.

The attendance figures do not include the crowd of 12,581 that watched the nationally televised East-West all-star match from Oakland, or the current playoff matches.

A one-night attendance record was set on July 8 when 13,492 people watched Phoenix, with Chris Evert, play Pittsburgh, with Evonne Goolagong.

U.S. Pros Tie Wales

GLENEAGLES, Scotland (AP) — The United States professional golf squad played a 2-2 tie with Wales today in the $45,000 Double Diamond match play tournament.

It was an improvement on Thursday, when the Americans were shut out 4-0 by the all-Spanish European team.

Dave Hill sent the Americans off to a fine start today by defeating Brian Huggett 4 and 3 over the 6,613-yard, par-70 King course.

David Llewellyn and David Vaughan won their matches for Wales. Llewellyn downed Mark Hayes 3 and 2, and Vaughan defeated Jerry Heard 3 and 1.

Heard played in place of the U.S. captain, Johnny Miller, who took a rest after losing to Seriano Ballesteros of Spain Thursday. Miller was expected to play against Scotland later in the day.

Scotland and Europe drew 2-2, and that left the United States with a good chance of finishing in the first two in Group 2 and making Saturday's semi-finals.

In Group 1, England and Ireland also drew 2-2.

Underdog Swimmers Turn Winners

VANCOUVER (CP) — The underdogs took some surprising wins from Canadian record holders in the second day of the Canadian swimming championships Thursday.

The biggest surprise came when Robin Corsiglia of Pointe Claire, Que., who just celebrated her 14th birthday, outswam a strong field in the women's 200-metre backstroke to win a gold.

She defeated Lisa Borsholt, also 14, of Vancouver, and record holder Joann Baker, 15, of Thunder Bay, Ont.

Bill Sawchuk, 17, of Thunder Bay, figured in another upset in the men's 200-metre freestyle when he beat record holder Stephen Badger, 19, of Winnipeg.

None of the upsets set Canadian records but Sawchuk's time of 1:54.12 was equal to his personal best. Sloan's winning time was 1:02.51 and Corsiglia's was 2:38.89.

Canadian records were set, however, in the men's and women's 400-metre freestyle relays. The Canadian Dolphin Swim Club of Vancouver, took both events, the men with a time of 3:33.42 and the women in 3:52.98.

In the other events, Clay Evans, a Canadian from Huntington Beach, Calif., had to fight from behind to nip Stephen Pickell, of Vancouver, winner of three gold medals Wednesday and a member of the winning relay team.

The 22-year-old Evans had been favored in the race because of his strong performance during the Olympics, but turned in a lethargic time in the heats and was swimming in an outside lane.

Rob Grundison of Victoria chalked up a personal best of 1:58.32 in a 200-metre freestyle heat race and then went on to improve the time to 1:58.10 while placing eighth in the final.

Finlayson Arm Is Hot But Other Spots Cooler

With a few exceptions, salmon fishing success waned in most waters around Vancouver Island during the past week.

One of these noteworthy departures from the rule was Finlayson Arm, here fishing for chinooks to 26 pounds has picked up in the vicinity of Stone House, Misery Bay and Goldstream Island.

In addition, George Hall reports some of the best coho fishing "in years" with catches tipping the scales between four and eight pounds from the same locations. Many limits have been taken.

Hootchie-type lures, minnow and strip have been the main producers when trolled with from two ounces to two pounds of lead and up to 200 feet f line. Buzz-Bombers have also been doing well off the Island.

Waters between Bamberton and Sheppard Point, Indian and Coles bays and off Mill Bay are yielding chinooks to 4 pounds and coho to six with bait providing the best success.

Further north in Saanich Inlet, however, action is spotty with only a few chinooks to 10 pounds and even fewer coho showing off Wain Rock.

Oak Bay fishermen are coming back with catches of chinooks to 21½ pounds off Trial Island, the Victoria Golf Club shoreline and Fiddle Reef. Use strip for trolling and Buzz-Bombs or Stingsildas for casting.

★ ★ ★

Returns off the Victoria waterfront have slackened off but can still be classified as "good" with chinooks to 22 pounds and coho nearing nine pounds being boated from Brotchie Ledge to Albert Head. Killer whales went through the area late Wednesday, but barring further visitations, things should be back to normal today.

Andreas Jedinak landed the heaviest chinook around the south end of the Island this past week with a 35-pounder taken on anchovy Tuesday near Bentinck Island. Coho in the general area of Pedder Bay are averaging five to six pounds but sometimes are as heavy as the 10½-pounder Tom Hosie landed earlier this week on anchovy in Race Pass.

Some of the coho are being taken on the surface but in general it's best to get down with a pound of lead and 60 to 70 feet of line.

There's roughly a fifty-fifty mixture of chinooks and coho coming in from Becher Bay, where success has tapered off.

Dave Mackereth topped fishermen in the area with a 33-pounder boated Wednesday on a minnow off Beechey Head and coho have been tipping the scales to eight pounds.

Returns off Secretary Island have dropped off but catches of chinooks nearing the 40-pound mark have started to show up off Owen Point on the north side of San Juan Bay.

★ ★ ★

Further up-Island, catches have been spotty at Cowichan Bay and Nanaimo but many limits of coho averaging five pounds have been taken near Deep Bay using Buzz Bombs and Stingsildas.

Chinooks to 35 pounds can be found right up to the pulp mill at Port Alberni now but most of the return is still coming in from the bottom end of Alberni Inlet.

Bait trolled at a shallow depth is catching coho to six pounds near Tribune Bay and Hornby Island and bucktailers are having to work for spotty success off Bates Beach.

A few monster tyee, like the 50:03-pounder which earned Garfield Baxandall first prize in the Courier Derby last weekend, have been landed in the favorite river-mouth areas off Campbell River. But, again, success isn't easy to come by.

Coho to eight pounds, along with a few "northerns" to 10, are providing sparse returns near Butler Point, Bakers Pass, Savary Island and Grant's Reef.

Roy Smith Leads Challenge Series

Roy Smith of Victoria is in first place in the International Drivers' Challenge series super-modified series standings and Billy Hitchcox has clinched the championship in the hobby stock division at Western Speedway.

Both drivers will be back in action this weekend, Smith driving the Daffodil Special tonight at Tacoma's Spanaway Speedway in the third leg of the five-race IDC series and Hitchcox piloting his 1956 Ford in Saturday night's races at Western.

Smith picked up 160 points in Wednesday's IDC races at Western, timing in second fastest, winning the fast heat and taking the "A" main event. That left him with 211 points, just one ahead of Ross Fontes of Bothel, Wash., and two up on Bob Cochran of Edmonds, Wash.

Fourth IDC race is Saturday night at Skagit Speedway in Mount Vernon, Wash., and the series ends Sunday afternoon at Evergreen Speedway is Monroe, Wash. Smith is going after his third straight IDC title.

Hitchcox has clinched his crown with 1,761 points, 690 more than runner-up Gordon Stone with four nights of local racing left at Western. Bill Price, meanwhile, has opened up a 264-point lead in the super stock category.

MANUEL ORANTES
. . . upset victim

Orantes Ousted by Hewitt

TORONTO (CP) — Two major upsets took place at the $155,000 Canadian Open tennis tournament Thursday as defending-champion Manuel Orantes of Spain and the top women's seed Sue Barker of Britain were eliminated.

Orantes had his chances but lost, 6-3, 6-7, 6-4, to unseeded South African Bob Hewitt in men's second-round action.

Hewitt, who has spent most of this year recovering from a tendon operation on his right arm, lost his cool during the match as fans tried to cheer Orantes on to victory.

"It got to the point where I was trying like hell not to give them (fans) a whole lot of pleasure by having Manuel win," said the 36-year-old veteran, who is more noted for his doubles play with Frew McMillan.

"I was basically mad at myself, not at the fans. It's a funny thing, though, lots of people criticize professionals when they get mad. Then they go back to their own local club and do the same thing. You should see some of the performances at local clubs."

Barker, who is also recovering from an arm ailment, was trounced 6-3, 6-2, by No. 6 seed Cynthia Doerner of Australia in women's quarter-final play.

Barker received a steroid injection in her wrist last week to replace fluid. This tournament was her first competitive play since Wimbledon in late June.

In other men's second-round play, No. 6 seed John Alexander of Australia was upset, 6-7, 6-4, 7-5, by unseeded Italian Paulo Bertolucci, and No. 16 seed Mark Edmondson of Australia, the surprise winner of this year's Autralian Open, was taken out by unseeded Czech Jiri Hrebec 6-4, 2-6, 6-3.

In other women's quarter-final action, Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia, the No. 3 seed and highest surviving player, played typical women's tennis to defeat No. 7 seed Regina Marsikova of Czechoslovakia, 6-7, 7-6, 7-5.

Three men seeds made it through to the third. Jaime Fillol of Chile, No. 5, beat Aussie Geoff Masters, 6-1, 6-3; No. 10 seed Onny Parun of New Zealand bombed Australian Kim Warwick, 6-2, 6-2; and Francois Jauffret of France, No. 13 seed, took three sets to retire Chile's Belas Prajoux, 5-7, 7-5, 6-0.

Stacey Eagles Final Hole And Old Record Goes West

REGINA (CP) — There's nothing like going out with a flurry and Stacey West of Toronto did just that Thursday in winning the Canadian junior women's golf championship with a record-setting 227 total. West, 17, eagled the par-five, 421-yard, 18th hole Thursday for a two-over-par 75 on the day. Her 54-hole total broke the previous tournament record of 229, set in 1964 in Calgary by Sandra Post, a native of Oakville, Ont.

With earlier rounds of 75 and 77, West finished 12 strokes ahead of her nearest rivals — Judy Ellis of Kitchener, Ont., and Jill Badger of North Vancouver.

Ellis beat Badger on the second hole of a sudden-death playoff to decide the second spot. Both bogeyed the first hole of the playoff, but Ellis parred the second while Badger again bogeyed.

West, who won the title in 1974, faltered on the final day this year after leading the field by one stroke after the first round and six after 36 holes.

led the Ontario team to its third consecutive victory in interprovincial team competition.

The other members of the team were Ellis and Cathy Abel of Hamilton, who finished at 253 in individual competition.

Second and third in team competition, which ended Wednesday by totalling the best two of three scores of a team for two rounds, were British Columbia and Quebec, respectively.

Tracy Pierpoint of Victoria, in second place six strokes behind West going into the final round, soared to an 83 Thursday and a 241 total, and had to settle for fourth place. An eight on the par-four 12th led to her downfall.

"I had the makings of a good round until that happened," she said.

B.C. Players Stumble As Quebec Takes Crown

MANOTICK, Ont. (CP) — Quebec captured the interprovincial team matches in Thursday's second round of the Canadian Junior Golf Championship at the Rideau View Golf and Country Club, 15 miles south of Ottawa.

The Quebec team, whose members included Yves Tremblay, 18, of Tracy, Jim Duff, 16 of Maple Grove, Brian McDonald, 18, of Valleyfield and Andre Noles, 18, of Ste. Julie, registered a two-day total of 446.

The highest of the four scores was dropped each day.

Alberta followed at 457, defending-champion Ontario shot 459, Nova Scotia had 460 and Manitoba was next with 463.

The three low Quebec scores Thursday totalled 225, the lowest total of the day. Quebec's score Wednesday of 221 was also the day's low.

The B.C. team of Joe Limoli and Dick Zokol of Vancouver, Jim Rutledge of Victoria and Bruce Harper scored a 233 for a two-day total of 475 and a sixth-place finish.

Zokol came in with a par 72 and was the top B.C. player with a 153 total, while Limoli was 78-79 for 157, Rutledge shot 80-81 for 161 and Harper carded rounds of 86-82 for a 168.

Two Victorians' Bill Coupar and Lanny Sawchuk — were among the six B.C. players to make the cut of 159. Coupar fired a 78 Thursday for 155 and Sawchuk carded 79 for 157.

Zokul, Limoli, Danny Walker of Castlegar (157) and Blair Christie of North Vancouver (159) also made the cut.

A new marine rescue service that has been in operation since May 15 already has 30 rescues to its credit.

The service — called SAF for Safety Afloat — is volunteer-manned all the way and is sponsored by the Provincial Emergency Program, working closely with the Rescue Co-ordination Centre at CFB Esquimalt.

Talking with the men who got it rolling — Cliff Philpot and Bob Charlesworth — it's obvious that boaters all the way from Sooke to Maple Bay are that much safer because of SAF.

Cliff, who is marine rescue chief, put the whole thing together.

"I've towed in a few people with my boat, Cheryl II, and working on the open heart ward at Jubilee, I'm particularly concerned about people and their safety," he explains.

pat dufour

He enlisted Bob, who is monitoring chief co-ordinator, after getting to know him through listening in on his citizens' band radio. Bob is an enthusiastic fisherman. He and his friends had a buddy system going, so as to be in touch in case of any emergency.

Using Channel 13, SAF now has 23 radio monitors, who operate out of their homes and 80 boats that monitor when they're afloat. Bob, also has five "chase cars" that can fill in the gaps when needed. One of them belongs to Times printer Den Perry.

Cliff has a file of every boat in the SAF service, giving every detail ranging from the boat's size and capability to the operator's age and blood type.

The aim is to have 60 monitors and 200 boating units.

Bob doesn't think this will take too long to achieve.

"An awful lot of people are sandbagging (listening on Channel 13) and there are more than 10,000 licensed sets on Vancouver Island," he reports.

Another two boaters who play leading roles in SAF are assistant monitor co-ordinating chief David Richards and port chief commander George Oliver.

For obvious reasons, the monitoring coverage is heavier on the weekends but volunteers are listening in all during the week as well.

Cliff says many SAF volunteers are trained ex-navy types but to make sure everybody is up to scratch he intends to hold training sessions in the fall.

Gerry Hutchinson, who is PEP's Victoria zone co-ordinator for an area which takes in all of Vancouver Island and Pender Harbor up to Bella Coola on the Mainland, is elated at SAF's success and hopes it will spread farther afield.

"If it wasn't for a few dedicated people like Cliff and Bob it would be a pretty hard row," he asserts, "We're asking people's assistance when using Channel 13. They (SAF) are doing a great job."

SAF covers an area that has the record of being one of the three largest as far as disaster statistics go. Although Channel 9 is the official emergency one, it's reassuring to know that, turning to Channel 13, you'll find help too if you ever need it.

Even if you don't have a citizens band aboard SAF boating units can also help out in time of trouble.

Not too long ago one of them went to the help of a boat whose only means of signalling for help was a woman's bathing suit being waved from an oar!

Twenty two-man crews from across the country are in Victoria this weekend to take part in the annual sailing regatta of the Royal Canadian Sea Cadets. Racing, which takes place Saturday and Sunday in Esquimalt Harbor, will be in 420s.

The final event of the regatta, which is sponsored by the Vancouver Island division of the Navy League of Canada, will be an awards banquet Sunday evening in the clubhouse of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club.

RVYC has two sailing events scheduled for this weekend. Youngsters who have been taking lessons this summer under the club's junior cadet program will take part in a regatta Saturday, beginning at 9 a.m. On the same day at 1:30 p.m. there will be another race in the around-Discovery Island series.

The club will also have Wednesday series racing, things getting under way at 6:30 p.m.

Peter Copeland was top Laser sailor this week, Tony Rose and Andrew Burton placing next. In Cal 20s it was George Lewis's Sea Fever, followed by Bruce Waddington's Sunbeam and Pat Biden's Pegasus.

John Davies' helmed Impatience to first place in Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet competition. Next came Glen Higgins' Freeway and Denny Robinson's Hobo.

It will be ladies' day for the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association on Sunday. Women skippers will be competing for the Jim Saull Trophy. Racing begins at 10 a.m.

Larry Restall and Tony McAuley in Golden Gull were the winners of last Sunday's round robin competition for Sailerettes, winning the Weather-or-Knot Trophy.

From Left Comes 'Lum Shift' But Mike Still Beats Braves

By The Associated Press

"I've seen the Willie McCovey shift and the Henry Aaron shift, but never bringing an outfielder in to play the infield," said Mike Lum, shaking his head.

The "Mike Lum Shift" installed by Atlanta manager Dave Bristol brought left fielder Tom Paciorek in to play the infield, giving the Braves three fielders on the right side.

Lum, who doesn't consider himself a pull hitter, was baffled by the move, but obviously not shaken by it.

He smashed a single through the dramatic overshift into right field to score the winning run in the Reds' 3-2, 11-inning National League victory.

"That's a Gene Mauch play all the way, no ifs, ands or buts," noted Cincinnati manager Sparky Anderson.

He added:

"If you're going to pull in outfielders, though, you just as well should bring them all in. But you know what it really is in that situation? You pray. That's the best play—you pray. At that point, it is how do I want my poison."

The Reds had men on second and third at the time with Lum in a pinch-hitter's role and the dangerous Pete Rose on deck.

In Thursday's other National League games, Pittsburgh Pirates blanked San Francisco Giants 1-0, Philadelphia Phillies beat Houston Astros 7-1 and Los Angeles Dodgers nipped New York Mets 6-5.

In American League games, Minnesota Twins shaded Baltimore Orioles 5-4, Milwaukee Brewers turned back Kansas City Royals 6-4, Cleveland Indians dropped Texas Rangers 7-5, Detroit Tigers edged California Angels 5-4 and Chicago White Sox downed Boston Red Sox 4-2.

Tony Perez started the winning rally for Cincinnati with a single and went to third when former Cincinnati shortstop Darrell Chaney threw wildly to second on a grounder.

Bristol then made his move. With Perez at third and Dave Concepcion at second and a count of 1-1, Lum drilled a liner just out of reach of first baseman Willie Montanez' glove.

The hit was especially sweet for Lum, an ex-Brave who had asked to be traded last year. The Braves dealt him to Cincinnati for Chaney in the off-season.

John Candelaria scattered nine hits and scored the game's only run as Pittsburgh beat San Francisco. The shutout was the third of the season for Candelaria, 12-4, with two coming against the Giants. He hurled a two-hit victory at Candlestick Park on April 25.

Steve Carlton pitched a five-hitter for his fifth successive victory and Mike Schmidt hit his 32nd home run as Philadelphia beat Houston. Carlton, 15-4, struck out six and walked two in earning his 10th triumph in his last 11 decisions.

Mikes, Molsons Launch Playoff

Mike's Sport Shop, Victoria Molsons and Ingraham Hotel of the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League will battle under a double-round-robin format for the Greater Victoria senior "C" championship this weekend at Central Park.

Mikes takes on Molsons in the opener tonight at 6:30 and Ingraham plays Mikes at 6:30 p.m. Saturday.

Games continue at 11 a.m., 3 and 6:30 p.m. Sunday as well as 6:30 p.m. Monday.

Meanwhile, Sooke Merchants and Royal Oak Sporting Goods resume their best-of-five, league semi-final series tonight at 6:30 in Sooke.

Royal Oak leads the series 2-1 and if a fifth game is necessary, it will be played at 1 p.m. Sunday. If Royal Oak wins the series tonight, the game Sunday will be the first in the playoff final series against league-champion Seaboard Construction.

Liverpool Loaded

LONDON (Reuter) — Liverpool begins defence of the English soccer championship Saturday so stocked with talent that England striker David Johnson, for whom they paid Ipswich about $370,000 during the summer, may win a place only as substitute.

Liverpool, like all the top seven in last season's standings except Derby, begin with a home fixture against Norwich City. Derby is also an exception in facing serious injury problems at the start of the season.

England centre back Roy McFarland and young midfielder Steve Powell are both doubtful for the visit to Newcastle, also weakened when ex-England striker Malcolm Macdonald has moved to Arsenal for $700,000.

Queen's Park Rangers, who finished one point behind Liverpool last season, play host to Everton.

TOWN TALK

Now we know where all the tourists who are boycotting B.C. Ferries are going . . . to Kelowna.

Al Frame, president of the Greater Victoria Visitors Infortation Centre, received a letter this week from R. G. Eddy, chairman of the Kelowna Chamber of Commerce's visitor's information committee, who said the visitor count for July there was 9,631, compared to 8,057 in July, 1975. That's a hike of 20 per cent. Ferry travel was down 20.6 per cent that month.

In the sensitive world of international diplomacy, communications between nations tend to be carefully worded.

Mrs. Glenda Jans, a former British Columbian who now lives in Medicine Hat, Alta., was just plain unlucky when she took the ferry from Horseshoe Bay to Vancouver Island recently.

She had been looking forward to hearing the ferry blow its whistle. It didn't.

A B.C. Ferries spokesman explains ferry masters do not have to although they usually do.

The B.C. Ferries' signal on arrival is three short blasts and a long one, V for Victory in the morse code. Most ferries give one long blast before leaving and on leaving, if going astern as at Tsawwassen or Horseshoe Bay, three blasts.

Better luck next time Mrs. Jans.

Derek! Leslie! Eric! Ian! Woodie!

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

They screamed, they gushed, they squirmed, they fainted and one young lady got so carried away she "frowed up."

It all happened Thursday night at the Bay City Rollers concert at Memorial Arena.

Arena officials estimated there were about 5,000 early or pre-teen fans on hand — most of them female — for the 45-minute show.

There were six actual faintings and in each case, the young ladies were hauled up on stage and off to a back room for first aid.

There were two fake faintings, staged so the pair could get on stage and touch their idols.

And there was noise, noise and more noise.

One 13-year-old girl from Richmond saw only 10 minutes of the show before swooning. She was carried to the back room, and between bouts of howling hysteria and being sick, she screamed: "I've got to see Woody."

★

"You had to see it to believe it," one of the Victoria city police officers said. "When the show was over we helped her back to her bus . . . and she fainted again."

There was breathing room only among the crowd which threw tartan tams and scarfs — mementos of undying affection — as Scotland's latest craze group cranked out the rock and roll.

And in the midst of a 45-minute concert the houselights went on and the music was interrupted by a message from Roller manager Tam Paton.

Paton, sounding just like an elementary school teacher, announced:

"Either everybody takes two steps back from the stage or the Rollers don't continue. An everyone who faints is taken outside and doesn't get to see the rest of the concert, so we'll have no acting."

The mass moved backwards for all of three short seconds before surging forward against the stage to see Derek, Leslie, Eric, Ian and, especially Woody.

★

It didn't take long to whip the crowd into a frenzy.

"It's so bad," said Capital Record spokesperson Karen Ball, "that no girls are allowed backstage because anything, even slightly connected with the group is ripped off.

"In Toronto they ripped the chrome off the Rollers limousine: Yes, when the Rollers play it's an event, not just a concert."

"I'm really impressed with the way they deal with their fans, as a matter of fact. They don't just sing and collect money — when CHUM (a Toronto radio station) awarded 300 girls an introduction to the Rollers, the group kissed every one of them — and that's a lot of girls to kiss."

Firemen Strike Unlikely

The city of Victoria and its firefighters likely can resolve their contract dispute without a strike, firefighters union president Ross Cameron said today.

Cameron said the force has accepted the city's contract proposal, with the exception of a few minor adjustments, and firefighters will discuss the proposed contract next week.

"To give credit to the city, the city manager and the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association, are working at high speed on the final draft."

The union president said it is probable the force will enter into a two-phase agreement. The first phase will incorporate the major portion of the award brought down by arbitrator John Davie, including employee benefits and a 6 per cent interim wage increase.

The second phase would include the balance of the wage increase, to grant parity with Vancouver counterparts still negotiating this year's contract.

Cost of implementing the first phase is about 8 per cent and therfore under the Anti-Inflation Board's arithmetical guidelines, he said, adding after the second phase is completed the package will be presented to the AIB review board.

In the proposal put forward Wednesday, the city offered to drop its appeal if the firefighers agreed to the 6 per cent interim increase as well as referring problem points to the arbitrator.

Meanwhile, the city and the union are awaiting a ruling by the Labor Relations Board on whether a strike by firefighters—being held in abeyance—would be legal or illegal.

Both sides went to Vancouver Thursday for an informal hearing requested by the city.

Cameron said the LRB's decision that a strike is illegal would have far-reaching effect on the labor movement.

"It would mean that you could go all the way through arbitration and then have an employer tie the whole thing up for a year or maybe more" while it launched an appeal through the courts for any "left field reason."

Joint Drive To Beef Up Welfare Plea

Social workers and welfare recipients are joining forces to plan a massive demonstration to protest "pitifully inadequate" welfare rate increases, Community Action spokesman Sharon MacBain said today.

"For the first time the social workers have come to us, saying 'hey, this is terrible, we want to help,'" she said. "We have no resources, we've sent enough briefs and had demonstrations but he (Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm) won't listen.

"Our concern is to stir up enough people so that they demand another election."

A meeting was held today at Community Action headquarters to begin planning joint action by social workers and welfare recipients.

"When you see something like this disguised as social progress, it is hard to hide outrage," said Marilyn Callaghan, president of the B.C. Association of Social Workers.

MacBain said the minister, while saying British Columbia has the highest welfare rates, omits the fact that B.C. also has the highest cost of living.

Vander Zalm, in increasing rates for three categories, has decreed that single welfare recipients under 55 years of age must make do with their present $160 a month until at least next spring.

MacBain described this as "criminal."

She added, "The basic shelter allowance is $75 (a month) and the very lowest rent you can get is $110. That leaves $50 to feed, clothe and pay for utilities."

MacBain noted the new rates mean that a single parent with one child will be getting $320 instead of $270 while the federal commission on poverty set the poverty level a year ago of $468 for a parent and child.

"Paperwork is more important to this government than people work," she asserted.

Both she and Callaghan agreed the provincial government is taking advantage of what they called the "myth" that there are young single people getting fat on social welfare.

"No one can get fat — they can't even subsist on $160 a month," Callaghan said. "But somehow that myth does exist and the government is using it for all it's worth."

MacBain said the increases, due to come into effect Oct. 1, won't even cover the increased costs of B.C. Hydro and home heating fuels.

The rate increases were necessary but didn't go far enough, NDP human resources critic Norm Levi said today.

Levi said the increases do nothing for people between the ages of 40 and 55 who have great difficulty finding employment.

The Social Credit government led people to believe that the Mincome program would be extended for people between the ages of 55 and 59 but this hasn't happened, Levi said.

MacBAIN
. . . "pitifully inadequate"

Levi said the program will cost at least $4 million more a year than Vander Zalm has said.

Vander Zalm said Thursday the increases will cost $17 million, but the provincial share will be only $3 million.

Levi said the $3 million cost could be correct under planned federal legislation on cost-sharing for social services, but he said the legislation will probably not come into effect until the fall of 1977 and until then the 50-50 cost-sharing formula still applies.

Under the new rate structure, people between the ages of 55 and 59 will receive a $70 a month welfare increase; single parents and two-parent families with an unemployable breadwinner will get an extra $50 a month. All increases are effective Oct. 1, provided the recipients have been on welfare for at least four months.

Vander Zalm said the only consolation he had for single welfare recipients is that his department will continue to monitor those rates and will decide next spring whether they should be increased.

He said he wanted that time to see how effective his new job-finding program — Provincial Rehabilitation Employment Program (PREP) — would be in finding jobs for welfare recipients.

"We need from now to next spring to see what's happening," the minister said.

Vander Zalm said there are about 110,000 people, including dependent children, receiving social assistance and estimated that about 80 per cent of those would benefit from the rate increase.

6 MORE MONTHS FOR SEA ESCAPE

A William Head inmate who participated in a sea escape Aug. 5 was given an extra six months today in provincial court.

Derek John Paulsen, 22, one of three men who fled the prison in a rented boat piloted by a woman accomplice, had pleaded guilty before Judge William Ostler to the escaping charge.

Paulsen, who had been serving a six-year term for heroin trafficking, gave himself up to Vancouver police Wednesday.

Mayor Defends City Clerk

He defended city clerk Morran Waller, who has been under fire from individuals representing community groups for refusing to issue voter registration cards in bulk, for rejecting an offer to set up volunteer registration booths and turning down community-oriented promotion of registration.

"I take some umbrage at this criticism," Young said.

"We were not in a position to ask people to come down and register because the act was not proclaimed."

He referred to the amended Municipal Act, effective June 30, the last day of the spring sitting of the legislature, prior to which it was not known exactly what the changes would cover.

"I think it would have been an act of idiocy to ask people to register without knowing what the law was going to be," Young said.

"It galls me that . . . we still receive this type of criticism which I think is totally unfounded," the mayor added.

Recently the city has advertised its voter list with timing directed to closure at the end of the month.

Young said the efforts of Waller and his small staff were aimed at making the public aware of the need to register if eligible voters' names are not now listed.

The mayor said municipal voters' lists had been distributed to banks, trust companies, credit unions and public libraries. There has been display advertising in newspapers and on radio to encourage voters to check the lists and register if necessary.

Young said "I don't know what more the city of Victoria can do to get people to come down and register." He endorsed groups which encourage voters to register, but criticism of the system does little of constructive nature, he felt.

Meanwhile, lawyer Bob Milne, on behalf of Fairfield Community Association, said notice would be served on the city today that he will seek a B.C. Supreme Court order Aug. 27 requiring Waller to provide bulk registration cards for issue to association members.

The association argues that Section 38 of the Municipal Act specifies applications, in the plural, must be furnished on request.

8 Girl Cadets Swim To Shore in Storm

Eight girls from Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps and their instructor had to swim for their lives Thursday when a sudden storm swamped a whaler in Lambert Channel near Denman Island.

Two of the cadets were from B.C. and have been identified as Anna Marie Roy, 15, of Cumberland and Shawn Clouchier, 15, of Comox.

A spokesman for the Rescue Co-ordination Centre at CFB Esquimalt said winds were blowing southeast between 35 and 40 miles an hour when the incident occurred.

Another whaler with seven cadets aboard made it to shore, beaching on Tree Island.

Sub.Lieut. Rick Hine of Belleville, Ont. and the eight cadets in the whaler were thrown into the water but swam to shore. All 17 wore lifejackets.

Quadra has a practical leadership course camp on Denman Island and a male cadet from the camp ran between four to five miles to the nearest house to phone Quadra and report the incident.

Not taking any chances, the RCC alerted rescue forces.

The spokesman said the destroyer HMCS Terra Nova stood by, two crash boats from CFB Comox were sent to the scene, as well as a Coast Guard inflatable rescue craft from Parksville and a Buffalo aircraft from the Comox base.

Low on Dough? You Can Still Clean Up

When you're new in town, out of work, low on dough, and faced with outrageously high rental payments . . . there's still a legal, minimum-investment way to put yourself into a well-paying business instantly — washing windows.

Well, why not! Regular jobs are hard to find and window washers don't have to gear their lives to alarm clocks.

We're not talking about spray-cleaner, paper towels and smears . . . but professional window washing.

The first step in becoming a window-washer is assembling your equipment. The following tools are essential to window-washers and can be purchased at janitorial supply houses:

SQUEEGEES — For starters, two (one with a blade six inches wide and another 18 inches across) are enough. It's important to get squeegees with flexible rubber edges that are responsive to the touch.

POLE — Any old wooden pole to which your squeegees can be securely fastened will do. The pro models are made out of aluminum and extend out to 18 feet.

BRUSH — One is probably about as good as another, as long as you can attach it to your pole and use it to slop on the cleaning solution.

BUCKET — If you already have a standard pail of some kind you may well want to use it. A watertight canvas bucket is perfect for window washing; the flexible container, can be placed in a backpack along with a retractable pole and other equipment . . . and the entire business can be carried everywhere.

CLEANING SOLUTION — Many different varieties of window cleaners are available. Biodegradable solutions are convenient because you can sprinkle the waste water on the surrounding shrubbery when you're done with the job.

ODDS AND ENDS — You'll need a sponge, rags, and scouring pad (preferably one that doesn't scratch windows!). And don't forget your bookkeeping department . . . a 15-cent spiral-bound notebook for business records.

All of this gear should cost about $25 (approximately $10 of which goes for the pole), so you're not talking about a major investment. Remember that your tools are just as important as you are — so buy good stuff, treat it with respect, and make it last.

Your next step — after properly assembling a set of tools — will be to take the stuff home and practice on your own filthy windows. You'll probably have to experiment a bit to find out how much cleaning solution to mix in the water. Soap suds are a hindrance and can be scooped out of the water.

It will take practice to determine the angle at which your squeegee should meet the glass for the fastest and cleanest work. Hold the blade in your hand until you've mastered this basic window-washing skill and then try it the hard way . . . with the rubber wiper mounted on its pole.

The secret is wetness to wetness. Douse the glass throughly, dampen the squeegee's edge with a sponge and then run the blade down the smooth surface. Some of the rubber wipers seem to have streaks built into them, so if you have difficulty controlling yours, try another.

When you can really make those windows sparkle, start ringing doorbells in your neighborhood and try to drum up some business.

After a short time — providing no major catastrophes (like putting your fist through a $400 picture window) have occurred — you'll start feeling pretty confident. Go down to a printer at that point and order yourself 500 business cards with a catchy slogan. You'll be surprised how much effect that slogan will have — for example, "I'll bring clarity into your life."

With business cards in hand, start contacting the shopkeepers and store owners in your town. Act like a professional; present your card and always try to establish monthly or bimonthly accounts. Just being confident of the value of your service should get you through the sales pitch and land you some regular jobs.

Although you may not relish stomping around town, ringing doorbells and presenting your card, it's a great way to gain a fresh perspective on the old home town or become acquainted in a new area. You do have to learn to take the good with the bad however. On days when people are gruff and you can't find a single job, it's best to take the situation in stride, take the rest of the day off and try again tomorrow.

Plug That Gap!

DEAR ABBY: Suppose you had a friend who had a tooth missing right in the front of her mouth, and she kept saying she plans on getting it fixed, but it costs too much money.

This friend is always buying presents for others, but she keeps putting off getting a new tooth. Everyone keeps urging her to get that missing tooth replaced, but it's been years and she still hasn't done it.

Abby, how do you tell a person that even though she may be used to going without a tooth in front, those who have to look at her can't get used to it, and they wish she'd get it fixed? A FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: If the sight of a missing tooth bothers you, that's YOUR problem and it's up to you to handle it. (P.S. Perhaps if enough friends can't stand to look at it, they'll take up a collection for the dental work. Since you seem so concerned, I nominate you to head the project.)

DEAR ABBY: A ring is not positive proof of anything. I am a single woman who wears a wedding ring to work. Why? To keep the married swingers from bothering me. Pass the idea along. It works.—PROTECTED

DEAR PROTECTED: There's only one drawback to your idea. It keeps the single men from bothering you, too. But if you don't want to be bothered by anybody, it's a good idea.

DEAR ABBY: One of the girls who works where I work is getting married next Saturday. Everyone else who works here received a printed invitation to the wedding and reception three weeks ago. They all gave her gifts.

She gave me an "invitation" this morning by mouth, and I can't make it. Must I give her a gift?—SLIGHTED

DEAR SLIGHTED: Give her a gift "by mouth." Say, "Best wishes."

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were kidding around, and we agreed to tell each other our fantasies.

First I told him about mine, and he got so mad he started to yell and call me all sorts of names.

After he calmed down, I asked him to keep his part of the bargain and tell me his, and he said all his fantasies were about me. (Do you believe that?)

I don't really have a problem, Abby. The real reason I wrote is this: If a married woman ever writes and asks you if she should tell her fantasies to her husband, tell her not to. It's the dumbest thing I ever did.—CLATTERTRAP

DEAR ABBY: When I was 19, I married a man who was 27, and we were so much in love we never thought we would have any problems. We have been married two years, and I am miserable.

He is a professional man, and I never got past the ninth grade. He is always correcting my English and has even suggested I go back to school and graduate.

Abby, I feel he thinks I am not good enough for him. If he loved me as I was, why is he ashamed of me now? What should I do? — UNEDUCATED

DEAR UN: Get in touch with your public education system and resume your schooling where you quit. It can be done by mail or in evening classes with other adults. Your husband loves you, or he wouldn't encourage you to graduate. Ther is no shame in not knowing — only in refusing to learn.

DEAR ABBY: What do you give a man who has everything? — I.M. SERIOUS.

DEAR SERIOUS: If I were with the Internal Revenue Department, I'd give him an audit!

The Formula

By NORMAN H. STARK

Adhesion is caused by a strong attraction between molecules of dissimilar substances in contact with each other. Wallpaper, attached to a different surface such as a plastered wall, demonstrates this principle.

Wallpaper, at least in my opinion, is an excellent decorating material. The almost endless variety of colors, designs and textures make it far more versatile than paint, and it seems to have a warmth that a painted surface doesn't have. But even the best grades do get worn and dirty in time, or you may just get bored with the same pattern and color year after year and want to replace it. Now comes the problem of breaking the adhesion so it can be removed.

To make a good inexpensive wallpaper remover you'll need one-half cup liquid detergent, two cups of water and one-half cup ethylene glycol (found at an automotive or hardware store). Mix the three materials together.

To use, mix one-cup of the concentrate into one quart of hot water and apply to wallpaper with a sponge. Allow to soak for ten minutes or so, and remove with a scraper. Store in glass or plastic container.

Like any chemical product you use at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.

Ingredient Unavailable

The Times ran an article August 6 for making a commercial-type carpet cleaner at home and has since learned that one of the ingredients is not available at Victoria drug stores.

Lauryl pyridinium chloride, the missing ingredient, is carried by some industrial chemists in the Vancouver area, but as far as can be learned is not sold in the small quantities called for in the carpet-cleaning formula.

However, for those who want to clean their own carpets, the following formula works, and all ingredients are easily available.

Take two ounces of liquid detergent and mix with one ounce of household ammonia in three quarts of water.

Spread the mixture in and around spots on the carpet, then sprinkle corn starch over the damp area and lightly brush in.

When dry, vacuum the cornstarch.

This will work on all carpets except where the carpet is wool and the spill penetrates the fibre like a dye. For those spills, commercial cleaners still remain the best bet.

Bakers Busy

Ten thousand years ago, Swiss Lake dwellers were the first bread makers. They ground and milled nuts and wild grains and baked the mixture in the strong sun. Seven thousand years ago, leavened bread was first made by Egyptians. In the early years of Canada, bread-making was a domestic art and many homes had outside ovens. Today in Canada there are more than 1,708 bakery operators, employing 20,246 people, manufacturing a variety of bakery products for Canada's more than twenty-two million consumers.

New Concepts Bring Swing In Production

New York Times

NEW YORK — The same Milan-based innovators who reshaped modern furnishings throughout the world in the 1960s have returned with updated concepts in typewriters, cookware, chairs, desks and shelving systems.

But in the flood of new products now appearing in showrooms and in stores, there are some major differences.

For one thing, increasingly the labels show that what is conceived in Milan is manufactured elsewhere — from Glasgow to Tokyo.

For another, although designers are still toying with technology and have introduced a number of ingenious improvements, some architects have now tired of playing around with plastics. The higher pricing of petrochemicals since the 1973 oil crisis has something to do with it, too. And they have returned to such basic materials as wood, metal and even, in one case, to textiles, fashioning furniture that is mostly fabric.

Mario Bellini, that genius with machines whose name is a byword in factories in Milan and now from Scotland to Japan, will soon be better known to North Americans too. That's because Bellini is responsible for a new cassette deck that Yamaha is producing in Japan. The architect has also designed the sports-car styled, low slung and sleek Olivetti typewriter that is the first electric portable to boast interchangeable typing elements. It's made in Glasgow.

The typing elements — golf-ball shaped to pop easily in and out — come in pica and elite sizes and four styles are available. The typewriter, an 18-pound wonder (24½ pounds in its case) also uses ribbon cartidges for ease of handling.

But the Olivetti Lexicon 82, in stores since spring at $300, may be upstaged by the fall. That's because the Lexicon 83, its successor, will then be available. And from the reaction of the manufacturers, the newer jet-toned model may well bring black back.

Both Olivettis are being manufactured in new facilities in Scotland, a first for this manufacturer. And although the Italian producer credits the change to "expansion," others view such moves by manufacturers as a result of continuing political and production problems plaguing the Italian industrial scene.

Whether it's glass or the technical facilites of an office furniture factory, some manufacturers have found that U.S. production is more efficient and faster. That is certainly the case for Emilio Ambasz, an Argentinian who divides his time between New York, where he was curator of design at the Museum of Modern Art until he resigned this summer, and Bologna, where he works on architecture and design problems. Ambasz's first major designs being introduced here in stores by late fall were worked out with Giancarlo Piretti in Italy.

But the innovative seating systems on which they collaborated permit the chair backs to move backward or forward with the sitter, and allow the seat to rise or fall with the body movement — without manually readjusting the base. The systems will be made by Krueger, a U.S. office furniture producer, in its Green Bay, Wisc., factory.

Called "Vertebra" the chairs will be offered in more than a dozen variations: with and without arms, on straight-legged, disk-pedestal and castered bases. When the office furniture was introduced at Neocon in Chicago in late June, a Krueger spokesman reported, the three chairs on view were tested by thousands, "and never empty from the opening on Wednesday to the closing on Friday night." No prices have been announced by the range will probably be from about $50 to $400-plus.

I have tried every way to stop smoking, with no result. Are there any drugs that are scientifically accepted that will help me? — Mrs. B.S.G.

Dear Mrs. G.:

It is accepted that smoking tobacco has two important factors. There undoubtedly is some physiologic or body-dependence on the drug contained in tobacco. There are also psychological and social values attached to the smoking habit.

With these forces at work, it is understandable that some people may find it impossible to give up this hazardous habit.

All kinds of drugs have been tried with little or no success. Most of these over-the-counter drugs cater to the desperation of people who are caught in the bondage of tobacco.

Recently however, the American Health Foundation, in conjunction with the National Cancer Institute, has begun an intense study on anti-smoking drugs. Special chemicals, are being tried to reduce the "pleasant" effects of nicotine.

This large-scale study, in addition to re-education and psychological support, may yet be the answer to helping from their addiction.

I have had two attacks of quinsy sore throat. When I am sick I can't wait to have my tonsils taken out. When I recover, I'm terrified to do it. No one seems to help me out of this dilemma. — Miss F. R.

Dear Miss R.:

The dilemma that you are in is self-made. And you are not alone in such behavior.

Many people go on from one quinsy sore throat to another, unnecessarily suffering the agony of this painful condition.

This is foolish, because once the tonsils have been removed the possibility of a quinsy, or peritonsillar abscess, no longer exists.

A quinsy sore throat is a collection of pus around the tonsils, between the tonsil and the sheath that surrounds it. One attack of quinsy may not necessarily predispose a person to another. Yet the chances are great for another attack. This is based on the fact that the tonsils are fundamentally diseased and are more susceptible to the extension of infection.

Anyone who has ever had a quinsy sore throat knows how painful it can be, especially if the abscess is incised and drained. The discomfort of a tonsillectomy is far less than the pain of one attack of quinsy sore throat.

DR. COLEMAN welcomes letters from readers. Please write to him in care of The Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, B.C.

indoor gardens

By LYNN AND JOEL RAPP

Dear Lynn and Joel:

Are there any general rules you might offer about moving plants from home to new home or even state to new state? We're about to move and I really want to take my "green family" with me.— B.K.

Dear B. K.

It's really amazing how many people would rather leave behind a picture or an extra set of dishes than a favorite plant. In any event, once you've checked to make sure you can legally bring your plants into your new state — some states, like California, have rules against it — the best thing to do is see that they're carefully packed in ventilated boxes. If your move is being made by professional movers, be sure they treat the plants as carefully as they would any valuable piece of furniture, and keep an eye they don't cart the plants outside and then let them sit in the hot sun while they load other things. If you're making your own move and you might be traveling for over a day or two, be sure to give your plants some exposure to light — maybe when you stop for lunch, or whatever. And finally, don't be too surprised if it takes them a while to adjust to their new home. It takes you a while, doesn't it?

Lifejackets: It's Vital To Know What You Want

caveat emptor

By LYNNE GORDON

One would think that anything called a "lifejacket" should at least be tested to see whether it can save a life. That, however, isn't always the case. All flotation devices do not need to be approved by the government before they can be sold in Canada.

There are two types of devices that are commonly lumped together under the term "lifejacket".

First, the Small Vessel Regulation Life-jackets, which must meet federal government standards and be approved by the Canada Ministry of Transport (MOT). To qualify, the device must turn the wearer to a safe flotation position. A safe position, especially if the person is unconscious, is face up and mouth clear of the water.

The second type, the Personal Flotation Device, won't necessarily turn the person into a safe flotation position, even though it might. The important thing is that it isn't guaranteed to do that; it simply promises to keep the person afloat.

There is a federal government standard for personal flotation devices but it's voluntary. Thus all personal flotation devices on the Canadian market won't necessarily have the MOT seal of approval.

It would seem then that lifejackets would be the number one choice, simply because they "do" more in terms of safety. That, however, isn't necessarily true. Any device will be useful only if it's worn. And the problem with lifejackets is that they are often too hot and bulky and people, especially children, refuse to wear them.

Personal flotation devices, on the other hand, are not quite as bulky or hot, and because they are worn like jackets rather than around the head and down the front of the body as is the case with most lifejackets, they are more comfortable to wear.

It's important to know what use you'll be putting a lifejacket to before deciding which type you need. A child, for example is likely to be more willing to wear a personal flotation device, provided the straps are comfortable, than a bulkier lifejacket while boating.

Adults too must feel comfortable if they are to wear either type. The test is, what will you be doing when you need to wear a lifejacket? If you're canoeing, is the device comfortable enough to be worn while paddling?

Don't expect perfect comfort from either type at all times. Remember that no matter which device you're wearing, you're not going to feel anything but hot and sticky in above 25 degree weather.

Two types of materials are generally used in lifejackets and personal flotation devices. They are made either from kapok or unicellular foam.

Unicellular foam is preferred by safety experts who explain that kapok is more likely to become waterlogged Kapok is enclosed in a vinyl-casing which can break and let in water. Unicellular foam, they say, stands up to abuse.

To maintain a buoyant quality, lifejackets and personal flotation devices must be properly cared for.

They should not be used as cushions on the bottom of a canoe nor should they be used as fenders on a boat to prevent scratching at a dock.

When they are wet, they should not be left on the bottom of a boat in an inch of water nor should they be thrown into a damp corner of a boat house.

All these things destroy the buoyant properties of lifejackets and render them useless when you need them — in an emergency — to save a life.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

It is an obvious fact that the queen, jack, and ten of any particular suit are all equivalent in value, and are tied for third place behind the ace and king. But, at times, it can make a heck of a difference as to which of these three equivalent cards declarer plays — as was demonstrated in today's deal.

NORTH
♡ K 10 8
◇ J 9 7 5 4 2
♣ A 7

WEST	EAST
♠ Q 10 8 6 5	♠ A 7 4 2
♡ 7 5 3 2	♡ 9 6
◇ A 6	◇ Q 8

SOUTH
♡ A Q J 4
◇ K 10 3
♣ Q J 10 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ♠.

North's raise to three no-trump was, perhaps, a slight overbid. He made the bid in the hope that his diamond suit would produce quite a few winners. But, as it developed, not even one diamond trick was made.

West's opening spade lead was won by East's ace and a spade was returned, South's king taking the trick. Having only six sure winners, declarer was not happy about his situation.

At trick three he led the queen of clubs, which West covered with the king, dummy's ace winning the trick. With three club winners now in the till, declarer's total had just reached eight. But he never did make his ninth trick, for West, when he later took his diamond ace, cashed his three spade winners.

Actually, even if one were to look at all four hands, it would be quite difficult to see how declarer could have fulfilled his contract. Technically, he couldn't if the West defender took the winning position. But I think declarer could have made his contract.

Put yourself in the West seat. Suppose that, at trick three, South had led the ten of clubs instead of the queen. Would you have covered the ten with the king if you didn't know the South hand? In all probability you wouldn't. And if you didn't, South would now have four club winners, for his next lead would be a low club to dummy's ace, felling your king.

But when, in the actual play, declarer chose to lead the club queen in taking the finesse, West's covering of the queen with the king was automatic; and, of course, declarer was now restricted to just three club tricks.

Thus, since declarer intended to take the club finesse, was not the lead of the club ten, instead of the equivalent queen, the correct play?

Troops Kill Five

DACCA (AP) — Bangladesh troops killed five saboteurs from India who planned to blow up a bridge road north of this capital, officials in Dacca announced. They quoted the only survivor as saying the team was trained in an eastern Indian state which borders Bangladesh and planned to dynamite a bridge on the road from Dacca to Mymensingh.

British Violin-Piano Duo Offer Balanced Brilliance

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

This has been a good year for chamber ensemble type performances reaching a climax this summer with the prestige laden Shawnigan series. So the British violin-piano duo of Jack Rothstein and Linn Hendry was in good company with a Victoria Art Gallery recital Thursday — company to which they did conspicuous honor.

Their ensemble performance reflects a striking harmony of thought and intention, a mutuality in expression and a balanced brilliance in execution that is, on the whole, rare, and the result not only of a lengthy working association but of the coming together of two closely similar musical personalities.

Hendry has subtle ways of smoothing the basic enharmonic differences between violin and piano and this, with Rothstein's perfection of pitch creates a notably luminous tonal texture throughout their work.

There was an immensely satisfying reading of one of the loveliest Mozart violin-piano works with its hauntingly tender middle movement and frolicking presto.

Rothstein's command of broad, rich color, the bite and sweep of his bowing techinque in the Schumann D minor Sonata as much as the precision and pliancy revealed in the Mozart, are attributes of a true artist-virtuoso.

Both instruments are treated with extreme virtuosity by Tartini in his Grande Sonata which opened the program, and both artists were in easy command of all the challenges involved.

As a garnish to the second half of the evening the duo offered a fluently articulated Perpetuum Mobile by Novacek; a touch of schmaltz in the Kreisler arrangement of Rimsky-Korakov's Hymn to the Sun (played with taste nevertheless and luminous violin tone) and a charming work by 20th century composer Josef Suk — Un Poco Triste — in which a variety of moods were effectively explored.

Townsend Plays Guitar Sunday

Guitar studies that began at the age of 15 led Byran Townsend to the decision to become a classical guitarist exploring the whole range of existing literature for that instrument.

He prepared for a performance career at the University of Victoria, pursued advanced studies in Spain with Jose Tomas and in Montreal with Michael Strutt.

On Sunday at 8 p.m. Townsend will appear at Victoria Art Gallery, 1040 Moss, in a recital of virtuoso works extending from the Renaissance through the 20th century.

Selections by Leopold Weiss, Stephen Dodgson, John Dowland and Reginald Smith-Brindle will span classical aspects while the Spanish tradition will be demonstrated with works by Narvaez, Ponce and Rodrigo among others.

Buying Trends on a Cool Summer Puzzle Merchants

★ MOTELS FILLING

No-Vacancy signs are finally starting to light up on motels around Victoria, Visitors Information Bureau head Don Nixon said Thursday.

August, which is traditionally the best month for the tourist industry, is proving no exception this summer, although it hasn't fully come up to last year's number of visitors.

Nixon said the last three weeks of August are the key ones for the proprietors of the areas's 4,500 hotel and motel rooms, and the industry is optimistic the high occupancy rate will continue through the end of the month.

The weather this summer — a puzzle to meteorologists and Victorians alike — has also created a paradox for some retail merchandizers.

Umbrella sales, for example, are way up.

In fact, it has been a bumper year for bumbershoots, as might be expected.

Ice cream sales are down, but at some stores, bathing suits and light dresses are selling as if this was a normal summer.

"It defies logic," says Spencer's Stores manager Lloyd Davies.

Sales of umbrellas and plastic rain coats always jump on a rainy day, Davies said. "Naturally we've done very well on these items this summer."

But at the same time bathing suit sales at Spencer's are way up over last year. "Don't ask me why," Davies said.

A spokeswoman in Eatons' sportswear said bathing suits and summer dresses have sold well, although she admitted the store didn't re-order as it probably would have had to if the weather had been better.

Woodwards has also had a normal summer as far as sales of summer items are concerned, the store superintendent said.

The Bay, however, reported bathing suits and summer outfits didn't sell well until put on clearance sale.

"We put them on sale in July — far earlier than usual," a spokeswoman said. "I guess it's hard to get the incentive to buy a summer outfit in the rain."

"Would you feel like a popsicle this morning?" a representative of Palm Dairies said when asked if the weather was affecting sales.

Although ice cream sales are not bad, he said novelty items like popsicles are way down.

If the weather got hot, he said, "we wouldn't be able to keep our outlets supplied. In hot weather, ice-cream is all people can think about."

"We've had better summers," said a spokesman for Silverwoods dairies. "The weather had not exactly been an incentive for soaring ice cream sales.

"The sun is our best salesman. We've missed him this year," he added.

MILEAGE HIKE URGED

City council finance committee Thursday recommended Victoria raise its car mileage rate by two cents for municipal employees using their own cars on civic business.

The existing rate of 18 cents a mile for the first 500 miles per month and 10 cents thereafter with $30 and $60 minimums according to group class, would go Sept. 1 to 20 cents a mile the first 500 miles and no change in the monthly minimums.

Comptroller-treasurer Mason Sheldrick said it costs the city about $42,000 a year for car mileage, or around $700 for each person eligible to receive the subsidy.

A survey by his staff showed it would cost the city 18-23 cents a mile to operate vehicles purchased by the municipality for use by employees claiming gas mileage. But the engineer reported his staff would not be able to keep up with maintenance nor provide parking space for additional vehicles.

Saanich pays 18 cents a mile for vehicles under 3,000 pounds; 23 cents for those over 3,000 pounds with a five-cent premium to instrument men and a guarantee to certain employees of $40-$70 a month.

Oak Bay pays 18 cents a mile to a maximum of 500 miles a month; the regional district pays 18 cents up to 8,000 miles and nine cents for excess by vehicles up to 2,600 pounds, and for heavier vehicles 23 cents the first 8,000 miles and 11.5 cents thereafter.

Esquimalt pays lowest of the four core municipalities at 16 cents for vehicles under 2,600 pounds and 22 cents for heavier ones.

City Reluctantly Pays Stadium Cost Sharing

A move to protest the city's share of Centennial Stadium's operating expenses failed Thursday in city council's finance committee.

Victoria's share based on the 1976 inter-municipal formula will be $10,198, up from $8,979 last year. The total budget is $24,432 shared between the four core municipalities — an increase of 13.8 per cent over last year.

Ald. Ron McKenzie said the city is probably paying more than its proper share, based on actual usage by sports groups from the city, and moved the request for payment be simply recieved and filed without payment.

City manager James Bramley said if the city did not support the stadium other municipalities also would likely pull out, since the city pays the largest share of the operating budget. The stadium would then not be available for use by sports clubs in the community because the university cannot legally pay for public use, Bramley said.

Mayor Mike Young said he saw no reason why the city should not participate in the multi-use facility, an example of all parties getting the most use of the stadium at the fairest cost.

He was supported by Ald. Bill Tindall and Ald. Helen Beirnes in a motion to pay the account subject to a check on thesharingformula.Inthe the sharing formula. In the current year Saanich is expected to pay the largest portion.

Tindall commented: "If we pull out of this thing it will probably fall apart."

He said there is an obligation on the city to maintain the joint-use arrangement.

The mayor agreed with McKenzie who said his intuition told him Victoria taxpayers are probably paying too much, but Young said it would be difficult, if not impossible, to show how many city residents were members of clubs that use the stadium.

The committee rejected another bill, temporarily.

This was an account from the law firm of Williams Davie and Co., of Duncan, asking for payment of $3,405, the city's half of the cost of hiring arbitration chairman John Davie to settle the firefighters' dispute.

"I didn't think we owed them any money. We didn't employ the firm of Williams Davie and Co.," said Young, who referred to the arbitrator as "a personal appointment."

The committee asked that the statement be re-submitted.

MEMORIAL ARENA PLANS CLUB PARKING

Victoria's parks and recreation committee has come up with a Memorial Arena parking proposal for the people involved in figure skating or minor hockey.

The plan will see $1 parking stickers issued to adults involved with either the Victoria Minor Hockey Association or the Victoria Figure Skating Club.

Recreation director Jack Morgan is to investigate the times when the two organizations have the arena and limit the use of the stickers to those periods.

Morgan said parking charges at the arena had "seriously affected" the two organizations.

Canoes to Honor Chief's Grave Site

PORT TOWNSEND, Wash. — Five Indians from Vancouver Island are building two 36-foot and two 12-foot cedar canoes here to honor the grave of Chief Seattle, legendary Indian leader who died in 1866.

They are George David, 25, of Nootka, and his brother Ben, of Tofino, Pat Genger, also of Nootka, and Jimmy and Ernie Chester of Nitinat, situated halfway between Port Renfrew and Bamfield on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

A sixth helper is Peter Nakarak, an Eskimo from Nome, Alaska.

The carvers were commissioned by the Squamish Tribal Council and will unveil their work during the tribe's Chief Seattle Days this weekend.

The Chester brothers and David began carving in June and later brought in the others to help meet the deadline.

GARDENING

Check Plants for Exhibit Now

The gardener who thinks of entering flowers or vegetables in the fall shows next month needs to give attention to the plants now. The same care in some cases will increase the pleasure of the average gardener with no thoughts of showing, so why should both groups not benefit?

During the next week look over very carefully the plants which are beginning to come into bud and flower. These will be the ones normally blooming in late summer and early fall.

Without knowing what any one gardener may be growing, I can only mention some that I have known and grown in the Victoria area over the years.

Here are several fine shrubs that give fall background flower color to gardens. Their blooms can be cut for show display: Caryopteris Clandonensis, blue flowers on new growth of this year; Ceanothus Gloire de Versailles, a soft blue sometimes late as early September; Tamarix pentandra is pink and feathery.

Dark violet-blue little spikes of flowers are displayed by Hebe Autumn Glory; the hardy Fuchsia magellanica var. riccartonii has never failing purple and red blooms; the equally prolific Hydrangea hortensis offers globular heads of either blue, pink red and all shades thereof; the fall blooming Hydrangea paniculata grandilfora (Pee-Gee) with huge cone-shaped, creamy colored blooms; and the severa fine varieties of heaths and heathers now in or coming into flower. These latter are as much shrubs as hydrangeas and may be entered in shrub classes unless a separate class has been allotted to them.

Care at this time for these shrubs (excluding the heathers) is to give them a deep watering at the roots if this has been neglected during summer. Don't forget the subsoil is probably dry although recent showers have improved the top few inches.

Don't give fertilizer to shrubs now or until spring.

The herbacebus perennial group of flowering plants may need a bit of thinning out of weak stems down to soil level, thus allowing more strength to go to those remaining. On kinds like Heleniums, Helianthuses and Rudbeckias, it pays to remove all present flowers from selected plants to encourage stems to develop the buds which can already be seen.

Michaelmas-daisy (perennial aster) plants can be given a feeding of 6-8-6 in solution at the roots, with a good soaking at the same time. Cut out thin or weak stems at soil level. Mildew develops when these (and other) plants have been dry at the roots at some times during the summer and then are given normal watering later.

Among the vegetables one has the problem of not being able to assess the condition of possible exhibits such as carrots, parsnips, turnips and potatoes until they are lifted from the soil.

However, the experienced exhibitor judges a great deal by top growth. And also by careful exploration, by hand, in removing soil from around the tops of some specimens.

When possible "winners" are located, marked with colored wool (sticks may injure roots) to avoid pulling for meal uses during the next few weeks.

Squash fruits can be thinned to one to a trailing stem, and tomatoes on a selected plant or two will size up and ripen if small fruits are removed and used green.

Late Notice Received: Annual Show of Victoria Gladiolus and Dahlia Society is in progress this evening until 9:30 and all day tomorrow, Saturday in Hillside Shopping Central Mall. Re-opening at 9:30 a.m. and closing at 4 p.m. Saturday.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.
2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the stop your ad as soon as you get using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, greatest reader attention by the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified Action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

John Bernard Garraway, 1763 Glastonbury, was charged with attempting to steal a quantity of opiates while armed with a knife.
At the request of Legal Aid duty counsel Barry Mah Ming, Judge William Ostler remanded Garraway for one week for a bail hearing and possible further action.
Saanich police said last week a man who asked at the store for opiates produced a knife, but ran to an exit door when pharmacist David Henderson ran to another door. At the exit door, the man turned and took two steps but Henderson threw a shampoo bottle which flew out the door as the man left.

Loius Rickey Kasum, 17, of 626 Fernhill, was fined $250 by Ostler, put on probation for six months and instructed to do 40 hours of community work.
Kasum was found guilty Monday after a trial on a charge of assault causing bodily harm July 3 at the Esquimaly Sports Centre. He got into an argument with another youth, knocked the youth down with a punch, hit him twice more and then kicked him with a roller-skated foot. The victim suffered a 10-stitch cut one-half inch below his left eye.
Ostler said Kasum had no record and a good reputation, "but it is absolutely essential that people understand attacks of this kind . . . simply will not be countenanced by the courts . . . I abhor the use of boots."

Murray Henry Horton, 46, of 123 Simcoe, who only got $90 through his three offences, was ordered by Ostler to pay almost $580 in fines and restitution within three months.
Horton pleaded guilty to three counts of false pretences in two Victoria charges. Prosecutor Robert Mulligan said Horton wrote three worthless cheques June 4 and 5 to obtain a radio, a camera and a casette player worth a total of $429.44. The three items were then pawned for a total of $90.
Ostler fined Horton a total of $150, put him on probation for six months and ordered repayment of the $429.44. He specified Horton had three months to clean up both figures.
The guilty plea of Tery Bruce Simpson, 19, of 660 Wilson, to an Esquimalt charge of common assault early Thursday brought him a $75 fine from Ostler along with six months' probation and 45 hours of community work.
Mulligan said Simpson ran up from behind a young man, a complete stranger, in the 1100-block Esquimalt. He said Simpson hit the man on the back of the neck, then "danced around him with his fists up" urging a fight. The other man ran to the nearby Esquimalt police station.
At the station, said Mulligan, Simpson told the stranger that "you're dead and he would kill him after the trial." Simpson told Ostler he was "quite inebriated" and remembered chasing and swinging at the other man but not threatening him.

Nov. 9 was set by Ostler as the date for one trial and three preliminary hearings for Richard Allan Murray, 17, address not known.
Murray was first charged July 12 with possession July 10 in Saanich of a known stolen car. He was released on own-recognizance bail of $500 pending further hearing.
Later, he was charged with four counts of false pretences July 21-26 in Victoria, a Victoria home break-in and theft July 27 and a Saanich car theft July 28. Bail was refused on the last charge.
Murray was also sentenced Aug. 4 to 10 days for possession of marijuana and failing to appear in court July 19. He has pleaded not guilty to the false-pretences counts and chosen trial by county court judge on the other charges.

★ ★ ★

Surety bail of $500 was fixed by Ostler for Manuel Braga, 36, of 1328 Vining, who was remanded to Aug. 31 at the request of Mah Ming for further hearing of a two-count Victoria charge.
Braga was charged Wednesday with intent to wound in causing bodily harm July 23 to a Victoria woman "by cutting her with a knife" and with setting fire to a chesterfield on the same day in his home in a manner "likely to cause a building . . . to catch fire."
Publication or broadcast of bail-hearing details was prohibited in an order issued by Ostler at the request of Mah Ming.

Ronald Paul Garfield Cooper, 31, of 2319 Wark, chose trial in provincial court and pleaded not guilty to a Victoria charge of possession of a knife for a purpose dangerous to the public peace. Ostler set his trial for Dec. 10.
Cooper was arrested late Aug. 11 about two hours after police found him walking in the 2500-block Wark and suffering from a minor stab wound in the upper chest. They took him to hospital but he refused treatment and walked out.

★ ★ ★

Ostler set $500 surety bail for Sandor Borbely, 36, of 1655 Chambers, on a Victoria charge of possession of a knife Wednesday for a purpose dangerous to the public peace. The case was remanded one week for further hearing and the judge prohibited publication or broadcast of bail-hearing details at the request of Mah Ming.

★ ★ ★

In traffic court, guilty pleas to separate charges of driving with a blood-alcohol reading above .08 per cent meant fines of $600 each for Harold Lyle Carrigan, 34, of Vancouver, stopped Aug. 6 in Sidney, and John Frederick Hill, 43, of 4350 Harder, Aug. 9 in Saanich.
Richard Brian Waldie, 29, of 1122 Marchant, pleaded guilty to a Sidney charge of impaired driving July 30 and was fined $400.

He 'Died' To Live

WINSTON, Ore. (AP) — Glen Miller, 19, of Roseburg probably is alive today because he played dead after being attacked by a 450-pound Sumatran tiger while cleaning cages at the Wildlife Safari.
Miller, employed by the Wildlife Safari for one month, was listed in satisfactory condition after being mauled by the animal. He suffered bite wounds in the neck and claw wounds on his lower back.
Bonnie Riggs, the Safari's public relations officer, said Miller was cleaning cages in the tiger hut and apparently failed to close the gate. While his back was turned, the tiger pounced on him.
Miller played dead until the tiger backed off, then scrambled 15 feet to safety and closed the cage gate.

Gov't Will Expand Role In Economy, Says Trudeau

NEW YORK (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau is quoted in the current issue of Fortune magazine as saying the public interest requires government to play a "co-ordinating role" in economic planning in Canada.

He is quoted further as saying he will announce some of the changes he plans in that direction this fall.

"The changes we will make are designed to enable government to play this role," Trudeau said in an interview with Herbert Meyer, a staff writer for the business monthly which is published by Time, Inc.

The Trudeau interview serves as the centrepiece for an article in which Meyer assesses Canada's efforts to loosen its economic ties with the U.S. and concludes that the effort has expanded the role of government in the Canadian economy to the point where businessmen are worried that "the price of economic nationalism may be their own freedom of operation."

He quotes the prime minister:

"When they put me in the bag as a socialist, I begin to wonder if they're kidding or if their vision of socialism isn't so wide that they'd accept only an Adam Smith liberal. So they honestly think our economy can work in an absolutely free market? It's obvious that we don't have a pure free market in Canada and probably never did."

Trudeau says that if the free market system worked well in areas of overproduction or economic slowdown, companies would be cutting prices and cutting their salaries—which, he says, they aren't.

"The corporations themselves are not obeying the rules of the market. The consumer is not, in a period of slowdown, buying cheaper goods. He's buying at the same price. And there are fewer layoffs, and certainly you don't see wages going down any more in a period of recession. Presumably there's a sweet-heart deal between some unions and some corporations to pass the costs on to the consumer and keep the prices up."

Meyer says that in Trudeau's view businessmen object to government intervention only when the government's actions are not the ones that businessmen want.

Meyer wrote that Trudeau believes it is the responsibility of government to step in where free enterprise fails — in the area of matching people with jobs.

"We've got high inflation and high unemployment in our industrialized societies. In Canada's case, we've got unemployment at 6.9 per cent now and we've got inflation down to 8.9 per cent. Both we consider too high. How do you put the unemployed to work?

"And what do the bankers say about that? I'll tell you what they say. They say the government should step back. It's too much meddling that is causing these problems.

"The worst bitchers of all are the bankers. They have never had it so good as under my government. I'm ashamed."

PM's WIRING JOB JUST 'MAINTENANCE'

OTTAWA (CP) — The $9,000 worth of electrical work now under way at Prime Minister Trudeau's private residence was defended Thursday by Gerry Baker, chief of building maintenance for the public works department.

Baker's description of the electrical work partially confirmed details made public Wednesday by Conservative MP Tom Cossitt who blamed their necessity on "a comedy of errors for the taxpayer."

At a cost of $6,000, the department is boosting electrical voltage to the Trudeau residence, replacing an obsolete fuse box with a modern circuit breaker panel and repacing worn out basment wires considered a fire hazard.

The other $3,000 will be spent on connecting into one electrical transformer the electrical wiring from the prime minister's house and his heated swimming pool "to meet the requirements of Ontario Hydro regulations."

Baker said the power source for the house is in a kiosk on the grounds of the Trudeau residence. But the power source for the swimming pool is in a separate transformer. Ontario Hydro regulation stipulate both sources must be combined.

As for Cossitt's charge that the electrical repairs are ridiculous, costly and worthy of suspicion, Baker said the repairs to the house have been necessary for years.

"They're just one of many thousands of maintenance items the department takes care of just like you would in your own residence," he said.

Inflation Takes Added Capital

OTTAWA (CP) — The government says big companies are spending substantially more this year on new plant and equipment but most of the increase will be absorbed by inflation.

At the same time, all levels of government are spending more of the taxpayer's money than ever before but at a slower rate.

A mid-year review of private and public investment in Canada, released Thursday by Statistics Canada, said total capital investment by industry and government is expected to reach $42.5 billion this year, 12.1 per cent higher than the $37.9 billion spent during 1975.

The report, based on a late spring and summer survey of 24,000 business and government establishments, confirmed government predictions at the beginning of the year that there would be little real growth in the economy, a finance department analyst said.

The official said net economic growth will be close to zero after inflation is deducted from the 12.1 per cent increase.

The official said economic planners were satisfied for the time being to avoid a repeat of 1975 w hen there was a net decrease in economic growth.

Total capital spending is slightly higher than estimates made earlier this year, but this results from a firming of spending decisions by companies and governments and does not reflect an unexpected increase in economic acitivty.

The survey revealed major increases in capital spending for natural resource industries but only marginal increases, and some decreases, in trade, financial and commerical industries.

Clark Man Denies Bribe

MONTREAL (CP) — Gilles Varin, a former campaign organizer for federal opposition leader Joe Clark, pleaded not guilty to charges of bribery Thursday in a St. Jerome, court, 30 miles northwest of Montreal.

Varin, who was also a chief organizer for Rodrigue Biron, leader of the provincial Union Nationale party, has been charged with accepting a bribe of $6,920 in 1973 from an Ontario construction firm then engaged in work at Mirabel International Airport.

Varin is alleged to have accepted the bribe in return for the renting of heavy machinery by the Quebec government manpower training commission of which he was a director at the time.

The charge arose from evidence given at an inquiry into construction industry violence held in 1974-1975 under Judge Robert Cliche of Quebec provincial court.

Varin was suspended from the training commission as a result of the evidence presented at the inquiry, but was reinstated a short time later.

He was also asked to step down as chairman of Biron's campaign organizing committee last May, shortly before Biron made a successful bid for leadership of the Union Natinale party.

BANFF 'TACKY'—TOURISTS

BANFF, Alta (CP) — This mountain resort community was the focus of harsh criticism recently from vacationing tourists who called it "tacky," "indifferent" and "a souvenir town."

In a series of interviews conducted recently, a dozen tourist couples agreed prices in the townsite in Banff National Park are too high for everything from food to accommodation.

They also complained there was inadequate accommodation available for the thousands of visitors who pour in each day.

A tourist from Baltimore said the $17 to $25 charged for rooms "where seven or eight persons must share the same bathroom" was too much.

And a Los Angeles physician said: 'Prices here are average for a resort area — that's to say they're 35 to 50 per cent above average for a hamburger, a steak or a room."

Half of the tourist couples interviewed said they had experienced serious, time-wasting trouble finding a room.

One New York man was visibly annoyed: "I've been in a lot of vacation spots but I've never had so much trouble finding a place to stay as here."

A Palm Springs woman who had lived in Banff for several years, as a girl, said she was bitter and disappointed about the changes in the town.

"So many of the hotels don't seem to give a damn if you find a place or not," she said.

"Like they're saying you can go to hell or sleep in Lake Louise for all we care."

WET? GLOOMY? IT'S ALL TRUE

This wet, sunless, miserable month of August has been no figment of your imagination. The figures bear that out.

So far, rainfall has totalled 37.6 millimeters (about 1½ inches) with half — 19.1 mm coming in one day . . . Thursday.

Sunshine is down nearly 100 hours. As of Thursday, the sun has broken through the storm clouds a total of 86.1 hours. In a normal August we would have enjoyed 184.4 hours of sun.

Despite the appearanc of the sun today, the weatherman forecasts more showers over the weekend with the possibility of an improvement in conditions by next Tuesday.

B.C. Blocks BNA Issue

BANFF (CP) — B.C. appeared to be the major holdout Thursday as provincial premiers wrestled with the problem of patriating Canada's constitution from Britain.

The 10 premiers began talking about the British North America Act late Wednesday in Edmonton and continued their discussions through Thursday morning.

They emerged from Government House without issuing a press communique on their deliberations, with B.C. apparently the lone holdout on how to amend the constitution once it is brought to Canada.

The same subject was on the agenda for today's final session here.

Prime Minister Trudeau has given the premiers until Sept. 15 to come up with a way of bringing the constitution to Canada from the Parliament of the United Kingdom, after which, the prime minister said, he would act on his own to move the act of confederation across the Atlantic.

Sources at the conference also said Alberta injected a surprise note into the proceedings with suggestions for provisions which may set up a stumbling block to any complete agreement.

The proposal, according to sources, partially included the need for unanimity of all the provinces in any constitutional changes.

Sources were now predicting the probability there would be only partial agreement on any constitutional matters and that there was a possibility, if a partial consensus could be reached, that the premiers would meet again in

VANCOUVER (CP) — Members of the Plumbers, Pipefitters and Steamfitters Union walked off the job Thursday afternoon at construction sites operated by 15 Vancouver-based contractors, members of Construction Labor Relations Association (CLRA).

Te move did not mean a repeat, however, of the 37-day strike-lockout in the province's construction industry that ended just over a week ago with an industrial inquiry report.

Ray Callard, business agent for the union, said 200 union members were involved in the walkout Thursday and picket lines would only be set up at the locations of the firms affected. Construction work could continue at sites operated by those companies so long as it was not the work of members of the plumbers' union, he said.

Callard said the reason behind the strike was four issues that remained outstanding between the union and CLRA, bargaining agent for about 850 contractors.

He would not elaborate on the issues. He said there was some contention between the two sides as to what had been agreed upon and it would be better not to "negotiate through the press."

Callard said the union has asked CLRA to extend by at least one week the period within which the union could act on its last strike vote. That period under the provincial labor code is three months.

The company refused and Callard said the first bloc of workers, whose strike notice was first to expire, walked off the job. He said the next walkoff by a bloc of workers would not be until sometime next week.

Strike votes were taken last May by the 3,200 union members working for CLRA contractors.

Callard said the contractors were given notice of the union's intention to strike, but the company asked for no new talks and none have been scheduled.

Stu Cleavely, a union spokesman, earlier said that the membership met last week and voted to reject the report by industrial inquiry commissioner Jim Kinnaird as amended by CLRA.

The report recommended wage increases of 11.2 per cent to 13.6 per cent on base rates ranging from $9.50 to $12.19 an hour.

CDC Profit Up 79%

VANCOUVER (CP) — The city-based Canada Development Corp. (CDC) today announced profits rose 79 per cent to $16.1 million for the six months ended June 30 from $9 million in the first six months of 1975.

The corporation said in a news release that profits available for common shares after payment of regular quarterly dividends on preferred shares for the six-month period were $7.5 million or 24 cents a share compared with $6.1 million or 20 cents a share for the corresponding period last year.

The statement said profit improvement was mainly attributable to continued improved performance of polysar Ltd. and the inclusion of CDC Oil and Gas Ltd. acquired at the end of 1975.

Revenue in the first half of 1976 rose to $276 million from $230 million last year, an increase of 21 per cent.

After payment of regular preferred dividends, profit for the quarter was $2.9 million or .09 a share compared with $3.5 million or .11 a share in the second quarter of 1975.

$26,110 Theft Admitted

A Victoria man pleaded guilty in Victoria provincial court today to stealing $26,110 from the Victoria Autustic Children's Society over the past 13 months.

John B. Sullivan, 42, of 707 Esquimalt Rd., who sobbed as he appeared before Judge William Ostler, also admitted to stealing between $8,000 and $9,000 from Old Country Produce Ltd., a local company in which he was a partner.

Court was told the motive behind the thefts was "to entertain friends and deal with his loneliness."

Sullivan turned himself in to the Victoria city police fraud squad Thursday after talking to his doctor. He had been a member of the Autistic Children's Society for five years and its secretary-treasurer for the past 2½ years.

Court was told the stolen funds came from the human resources department and were intended to pay salaries of aides and teachers. Instead Sullivan wrote at least 48 cheques to himself or his business, ranging in size from $125 to $4,000.

He became partner-bookkeeper in the business recently and skimmed cash from the daily accounts.

Sullivan, who was remanded in custody to Sepe. 3 for preparation of a pre-sentence report and sentence, was 12 years a lay brother and teacher in California before returning to Victoria about eight years ago.

The society was reported to have a bank overdraft of $500 Thursday.

Autism is a mysterious disorder which leaves those afflicted unable to use language. Autistic children can be either completely withdrawn or hyperactive.

Sullivan had been deeply involved on volunteer work with the group, serving as tag day chairman in raising funds.

A former delegate to the Victoria Labor Council from the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, he led a campaign earlier this year for a residential treatment centre for autistic children which gathered more than 6,000 signatures on a petition.

Times News Service

U.S. troops, bolstered by the dispatch of two squadrons of warplanes to Korea, were on special alert today and North Korea ordered its troops on a "war posture" in response to growing tension over the border slaying of two American officers.

U.S. forces near the Panmunjom truce village were in full combat gear Thursday, taking up positions overlooking North Korea. All passes and leaves were concelled for the 42,000 American soldiers and airmen in South Korea.

U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger today called the beating deaths of the two officers a "premeditated act of murder."

"We cannot permit the principle to be established that Americans can simply be assaulted with impunity any place that some dictator or some aggressive country decides to score some points," Kissinger said in an interview.

Kissinger said the administration's response to the incident "depends on what it indicates about North Korean intentions. It also depends on whether we get any satisfactory response to our demand for explanations and reparations . . ."

"There have been certain reinforcements sent in order to discourage any attempts by the North Koreans to escalate it and we've increased the readiness of our forces there," Kissinger said.

In Washington, Pentagon spokesman Tod Hullin said Thursday, "I don't have any indication that we have any plans to take military action at this time," but added, "I'm not ruling anything in or out."

A North Korean Communist Party newspaper said American "manoeuvres" in Korea "have entered an extremely reckless stage" and accused the Unieed States of "kindling the blasting fuse of war."

In Seoul, 35 miles south of Panmunjom, South Korean President Park Chung-hee said today any future North Korean acts of provocation would be met with immediate retaliation.

"A mad dog needs a stick," Park said. "There is no reason why we should be unilaterally subject to their provocation.

"From now on, if they (North Koreans) stage illegal acts of provocation, we will take immediate punitive measures, whether such acts are big or small, and all the responsibilities therefrom will have to be borne by them."

Government sources said South Korean forces also were on precautionary alert. U.S. officials have estimated North Korea has 410,000 army troops and South Korea 560,000.

The report was brought down Wednesday and members of the five unions represented by the Joint Council voted all day Thursday on the contents.

Safeway Store Hit

EDMONTON (CP) — Three masked men, two carrying sawed-off shotguns, held an Edmonton family hostage early today in a quickly-executed extortion operation.

The family of six was shaken but safe. The men escaped with an undisclosed amount of money from a grocery store in northwest Edmonton, police said.

Brink went to the store, left the money in his car in the parking lot and then went to a restaurant to wait for a telephone call from the armed men.

The call never came and he alerted police who went to the store and found the car gone.

33 Blacks Die In S. Africa

Times News Services

JOHANNESBURG — Police said today 33 blacks were killed in three days of anti-government rioting in black townships around Port Elizabeth, the centre of South Africa's automobile industry.

"More bodies have been found," a Port Elizabeth police spokesman said. "Some of them were killed by knives; others were run down by motor vehicles, and about two were shot."

Police said 19 more deaths had been confirmed. Many of the victims were killed by police gunfire.

The area around the southeastern coastal city was "relatively calm" today, a police spokesman said.

Police Minister James Kruger said in a speech Thursday night that almost all the organizers of South Africa's continuing racial upheavals have been arrested.

At least 14 blacks died Wednesday when the violence swept through the all-black suburbs of New Brighton, Zwide and Kwazekele. More than $1.15 million damage was done to buildings and vehicles, township officials said.

South Africa's industrialists began calling for sweeping improvements in political, living and employment conditions in the riot-torn black townships which supply their labor force.

★ REFUGEES ATTACKED SAYS UN

GENEVA (UPI) — The United Nations high commissioner for refugees said today Rhodesian troops destroyed a Mozambique camp containing 3,000 refugees from Rhodesia and killed as many as 1,000 people in a raid early this month.

The agency's delegate in Mozambique reported some 1,000 fatalities and more than 500 wounded and said the camp, one of the three UNHCR camps near the Rhodesian border, was destroyed.

It also was reported that he saw mass graves containing mainly women and children.

The government of Mozambique appealed to the UNHCR to resettle the refugees, asking for $25,000 in food and refugee official said the survivors were moved deeper into Mozambique.

"Such a violation cannot be tolerated," a UNHCR spokesman said, "and the government of Mozambique should ask for a meeting of the Security Council."

Changes Urged for 747s

Times News Services

LONDON — Important modifications could be made mandatory for all Boeing 747 jumbo jets as a result of the findings of an East African inquiry into the crash of a Lufthansa 747 in November, 1974.

The crash, at Nairobi, killed 59 passengers and crew; 98 people survived, including the flight crew.

The official report, by the accident investigation branch of the East African Community, includes two specific design criticisms.

—The system of indicator lights in use at the time did not provide adequate warning that the leading edge flaps were not extended after take-off.

—The stall warning system did not give adequate warning of the critical condition of the aircraft because it was not programmed to take account of the leading edge flap position.

The plane crashed 35 seconds after take-off because the pneumatic system which operates the leading edge laps had not been switched on. This caused a stall which in the words of the report "the pilots were unable to identify in the short time available for recovery."

A statement by Lufthansa says that it and other airlines have decided to introduce all the recommendations proposed by the report. These also involve check procedures.

A failure of the crew to complete their checklist items satisfactorily is listed as a major contributory cause of the crash — the only fatal accident ever to a 747.

In this connection the report criticized Lufthansa's safety checks, which are thought likely to apply to a number of other airlines.

TRUNK LID SLAMS ON MODEST SOLDIER

WOODLAND, Wash. (AP) — The demands of modesty proved almost fatal in the case of a soldier from Oregon who was rescued Wednesday night by the state patrol.

Troopers say Jerry Stubblefield, 32, of Milwaukie, Ore., spent three days locked in the trunk of his car near here.

He told officers that he had climbed into the trunk early Monday to change clothes. He pulled the lid down for modesty's sake and it clicked shut.

The car was parked on a ramp leading to interstate 5. Troopers and Cowlitz County deputies said they checked the car a number of times but it wasn't until Wednesday when a patrolman was preparing the car for impoundment, that Stubblefield spoke up.

He was treated for dehydration.

The soldier said he was on his way to his base near Tacoma when the car ran out of gas. He said he wanted to change into his uniform so that the might report for work when he finally made it to the fort.

They screamed, they gushed, they squirmed, they fainted and one young lady got so carried away she "frowed up."

It all happened Thursday night at the Bay City Rollers concert at Memorial Arena.

Arena officials estimated there were about 6,000 early or pre-teen fans on hand most of them female — for the 45-minute show.

There were six actual faintings and in each case, the young ladies were hauled up on stage and off to a back room for first aid.

There were two fake faintings, staged so the pair could get on stage and touch their idols.

And there was noise, noise and more noise.

One 13-year-old girl from Richmond saw only 10 minutes of the show before swooning. She was carried to the back room, and between bouts of howling hysteria and being sick, she screamed: "I've got to see Woody."

★

"You had to see it to believe it," one of the Victoria city police officers said. "When the show was over we helped her back to her bus . . . and she fainted again."

There was breathing room only among the crowd which threw tartan tams and scarfs — mementos of undying affection — as Scotland's latest craze group cranked out the rock and roll.

And in the midst of a 45-minute concert the houselights went on and the music was interrupted by a message from Roller manager Tam Paton.

Paton, sounding just like an elementary school teacher, announced:

"Either everybody takes two steps back from the stage or the Rollers don't continue. An everyone who faints is taken outside and doesn't get to see the rest of the concert, so we'll have no acting."

The mass moved backwards for all of three short seconds before surging forward against the stage to see Derek, Leslie, Eric, Ian and, especially Woodie.

★

It didn't take long to whip the crowd into a frenzie.

"It's so bad," said Capital Record spokesperson Karen Ball, "that no girls are allowed backstage because anything even slightly connected with the group is ripped off.

"In Toronto they ripped the chrome off the Rollers limousine: Yes, when the Rollers play it's an event, not just a concert."

"I'm really impressed with the way they deal with their fans, as a matter of fact. They don't just sing and collect money — when CHUM (a Toronto radio station) awarded 300 girls an introduction to the Rollers, the group kissed every one of them — and that's a lot of girls to kiss."

Firemen Strike Unlikely

The city of Victoria and its firefighters likely can resolve their contract dispute without a strike, firefighters union president Ross Cameron said today.

Cameron said the force has accepted the city's contract proposal, with the exception of a few minor adjustments, and firefighters will discuss the proposed contract next week.

"To give credit to the city, the city manager and the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association, who are working at high speed on the final draft."

The union president said it is probable the force will enter into a two-phase agreement. The first phase will incorporate the major portion of the award brought down by arbitrator John Davie, including employee benefits and a 6 per cent wage interim wage increase.

Cost of implementing the first phase is about 8 per cent and therfore under the Anti-Inflation Board's arithmetical guidelines, he said, adding after the second phase is completed the package will be presented to the AIB review board.

In the proposal put forward Wednesday, the city offered to drop its appeal if the firefighers agreed to the 6 per cent interim increase as well as referring problem points to the arbitrator.

Meanwhile, the city and the union are awaiting a ruling by the Labor Relations Board on whether a strike by firefighters being held in abeyance would be legal or illegal.

Both sides went to Vancouver Thursday for an informal hearing requested by the city.

Cameron said the LRB's decision that a strike is illegal would have far-reaching effect on the labor movement.

"It would mean that you could go all the way through arbitration and then have an employer tie the whole thing up for a year or maybe more" while it launched an appeal through the courts for any "left field reason."

Joint Drive To Beef Up Welfare Plea

Social workers and welfare recipients are joining forces to plan a massive demonstration to protest "pitifully inadequate" welfare rate increases, Community Action spokesman Sharon MacBain said today.

"For the first time the social workers have come to us, saying 'hey, this is terrible,' we want to help," she said. "We have no resources, we've sent enough briefs and had demonstrations but he (Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm) won't listen.

"When you see something like this disguised as social progress, it is hard to hide outrage," said Marilyn Callaghan, president of the B.C. Association of Social Workers.

MacBain said the minister, while saying British Columbia has the highest welfare rates, omits the fact that B.C. also has the highest cost of living.

Vander Zalm, in increasing rates for three categories, has decreed that single welfare recipients under 55 years of age must make do with their present $160 a month until at least next spring.

She added, "The basic shelter allowance is $75 (a month) and the very lowest rent you can get is $110. That leaves $50 to feed, clothe and pay for utilities."

MacBain noted the new rates mean that a single parent with one child will be getting $320 instead of $270 while the federal commission on poverty set the poverty level a year ago of $468 for a parent and child.

"Paperwork is more important to this government than people work," she asserted.

Both she and Callaghan agreed the provincial government is taking advantage of what they called the "myth" that there are young single people getting fat on social welfare.

"No one can get fat — they can't even subsist on $160 a month," Callaghan said, "But somehow that myth does exist and the government is using it for all it's worth."

MacBain said the increases, due to come into effect Oct. 1, won't even cover the increased costs of B.C. Hydro and home heating fuels.

The rate increases were necessary but didn't go far enough, NDP human resources critic Norm Levi said today.

Levi said the increases do nothing for people between the ages of 40 and 55 who have great difficulty finding employment.

The Social Credit government lead people to believe that the Mincome program would be extended for people between the ages of 55 and 59 but this hasn't happened, Levi said.

MacBAIN

Levi said the program will cost at least $4 million more a year than Vander Zalm has said.

Vander Zalm said Thursday the increases will cost $17 million, but the provincial share will be only $3 million.

Levi said the $3 million cost could be corret under planned federal legislation on cost-sharing for social services, but he said the legislation will probably not come into effect until the fall of 1977 and until then the 50-50 cost-sharing formula still applies.

Under the new rate structure, people between the ages of 55 and 59 will receive a $70 a month welfare increase; single parents and two-parent families with an unemployable breadwinner will get an extra $50 a month. All increases are effective Oct. 1, provided the recipients have been on welfare for at least four months.

Vander Zalm said the only consolation he had for single welfare recipients is that his department will continue to monitor those rates and will decide next spring whether they should be increased.

He said he waneed that time to see how effective his new job-finding program — Provincial Rehabilitation Employment Program (PREP) — Would be in finding jobs for welfare recipients.

"We need from now to next spring to see what's happening," the minister said.

Vander Zalm said there are about 110,000 people, including dependent children, receiving social assistance and estimated that about 80 per cent of those would benefit from the rate increase.

6 MORE MONTHS FOR SEA ESCAPE

A William Head inmate who participated in a sea escape Aug. 5 was given an extra six months today in provincial court.

Derek John Paulsen, 22, one of three men who fled the prison in a rented boat piloted by a woman accomplice, had pleaded guilty before Judge William Ostler to the escaping charge.

Mayor Defends City Clerk

He defended city clerk Morran Waller, who has been under fire from individuals representing community groups for refusing to issue voter registration cards in bulk, for rejecting an offer to set up volunteer registration booths and turning down community-oriented promotion of registration.

"I take some umbrage at this criticism," Young said.

"We were not in a position to ask people to come down and register because the act was not proclaimed."

He referred to the amended Municipal Act, effective June 30, the last day of the spring sitting of the legislature, prior to which it was not known exactly what the changes would cover.

"I think it would have been an act of idiocy to ask people to register without knowing what the law was going to be," Young said.

"It galls me that . . . we still receive this type of criticism which I think is totally unfounded," the mayor added.

Recently the city has advertised its voter list with timing directed to closure at the end of the month.

Young said the efforts of Waller and his small staff were aimed at making the public aware of the need to register if eligible voters' names are not now listed.

The mayor said municipal voters' lists had been distributed to banks, trust companies, credit unions and public libraries. There has been display advertising in newspapers and on radio to encourage voters to check the lists and register if necessary.

Young said "I don't know what more the city of Victoria can do to get people to come down and register." He endorsed groups which encourage voters to register, but criticism of the system does little of constructive nature, he felt.

Meanwhile, lawyer Bob Milne, on behalf of Fairfield Community Association, said notice would be served on the city today that he will seek a B.C. Supreme Court order Aug. 27 requiring Waller to provide bulk registration cards for issue to association members.

The association argues that Section 38 of the Municipal Act specifies applications, in the plural, must be furnished on request.

8 Girl Cadets Swim To Shore in Storm

Eight girls from Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps and their instructor had to swim for their lives Thursday when a sudden storm swamped a whaler in Lambert Channel near Denman Island.

Two of the cadets were from B.C. and have been identified as Aana Marie Roy, 15, of Cumberland and Shawn Clouchier, 15, of Comox.

A spokesman for the Rescue Co-ordination Centre at CFB Esquimalt said winds were blowing southeast between 35 and 40 miles an hour when the incident occurred.

Another whaler with seven cadets aboard made it to shore, beaching on Tree Island.

Sub.Lieut. Rick Hine of Belleville, Ont. and the eight cadets in the whaler were thrown into the water but swam to shore. All 17 wore lifejackets.

Quadra has a practical leadership course camp on Denman Island and a male cadet from the camp ran between four to five miles to the nearest house to phone Quadra and report the incident.

The spokesman said the destroyer HMCS Terra Nova stood by, two crash boats from CFB Comox were sent to the scene, as well as a Coast Guard inflatable rescue craft from Parksville and a Buffalo aircraft from the Comox base.

Low on Dough? You Can Still Clean Up

family

Make Money Washing Windows!

When you're new in town, out of work, low on dough, and faced with outrageously high rental payments ... there's still a legal, minimum-investment way to put yourself into a well-paying business instantly — washing windows.

Well, why not! Regular jobs are hard to find and window washers don't have to gear their lives to alarm clocks.

We're not talking about spray-cleaner, paper towels and smears ... but professional window washing.

The first step in becoming a window-washer is assembling your equipment. The following tools are essential to window-washers and can be purchased at janitorial supply houses:

SQUEEGEES — For starters, two (one with a blade six inches wide and another 18 inches across) are enough. It's important to get squeegees with flexible rubber edges that are responsive to the touch.

POLE — Any old wooden pole to which your squeegees can be securely fastened will do. The pro models are made out of aluminum and extend out to 18 feet.

BRUSH — One is probably about as good as another, as long as you can attach it to your pole and use it to slop on the cleaning solution.

BUCKET — If you already have a standard pail of some kind you may well want to use it. A watertight canvas bucket is perfect for window washing; the flexible container, can be placed in a backpack along with a retractable pole and other equipment ... and the entire business can be carried everywhere.

CLEANING SOLUTION — Many different varieties of window cleaners are available. Biodegradable solutions are convenient because you can sprinkle the waste water on the surrounding shrubbery when you're done with the job.

ODDS AND ENDS — You'll need a sponge, rags, and scouring pad (preferably one that doesn't scratch windows!). And don't forget your bookkeeping department ... a 15-cent spirial-bound notebook for business records.

All of this gear should cost about $25 (approximately $10 of which goes for the pole), so you're not talking about a major investment. Remember that your tools are just as important as you are — so buy good stuff, treat it with respect, and make it last.

Your next step — after properly assembling a set of tools — will be to take the stuff home and practice on your own filthy windows. You'll probably have to experiment a bit to find out how much cleaning solution to mix in the water. Soap suds are a hindrance and can be scooped out of the water.

It will take practice to determine the angle at which your squeegee should meet the glass for the fastest and cleanest work. Hold the blade in your hand until you've mastered this basic window-washing skill and then try it the hard way ... with the rubber wiper mounted on its pole.

The secret is wetness to wetness. Douse the glass throughly, dampen the squeegee's edge with a sponge and then run the blade down the smooth surface. Some of the rubber wipers seem to have streaks built into them, so if you have difficulty controlling yours, try another.

When you can really make those windows sparkle, start ringing doorbells in your neighborhood and try to drum up some business.

After a short time — providing no major catastrophes (like putting your fist through a $400 picture window) have occurred — you'll start feeling pretty confident. Go down to a printer at that point and order yourself 500 business cards with a catchy slogan. You'll be surprised how much effect that slogan will have — for example, "I'll bring clarity into your life."

With business cards in hand, start contacting the shopkeepers and store owners in your town. Act like a professional: present your card and always try to establish monthly or bimonthly accounts. Just being confident of the value of your service should get you through the sales pitch and land you some regular jobs.

Although you may not relish stomping around town, ringing doorbells and presenting your card, it's a great way to gain a fresh perspective on the old home town or become acquainted in a new area. You do have to learn to take the good with the bad however. On days when people are gruff and you can't find a single job, it's best to take the situation in stride, take the rest of the day off and try again tomorrow.

Plug That Gap!

DEAR ABBY: Suppose you had a friend who had a tooth missing right in the front of her mouth, and she kept saying she plans on getting it fixed, but it costs too much money.

This friend is always buying presents for others, but she keeps putting off getting a new tooth. Everyone keeps urging her to get that missing tooth replaced, but it's been years and she still hasn't done it.

Abby, how do you tell a person that even though she may be used to going without a tooth in front, those who have to look at her can't get used to it, and they wish she'd get it fixed? A FRIEND.

DEAR FRIEND: If the sight of a missing tooth bothers you, that's YOUR problem and it's up to you to handle it. (P.S. Perhaps if enough friends can't stand to look at it, they'll take up a collection for the dental work. Since you seem so concerned, I nominate you to head the project.)

DEAR ABBY: A ring is not positive proof of anything. I am a single woman who wears a wedding ring to work. Why? To keep the married swingers from bothering me. Pass the idea along. It works.—PROTECTED

DEAR PROTECTED: There's only one drawback to your idea. It keeps the single men from bothering you, too. But if you don't want to be bothered by anybody, it's a good idea.

DEAR ABBY: One of the girls who works where I work is getting married next Saturday. Everyone else who works here received a printed invitation to the wedding and reception three weeks ago. They all gave her gifts.

She gave me an "invitation" this morning by mouth, and I can't make it. Must I give her a gift?—SLIGHTED

DEAR SLIGHTED: Give her a gift "by mouth." Say, "Best wishes."

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were kidding around, and we agreed to tell each other our fantasies.

First I told him about mine, and he got so mad he started to yell and call me all sorts of names.

After he calmed down, I asked him to keep his part of the bargain and tell me his, and he said all his fantasies were about me. (Do you believe that?)

I don't really have a problem, Abby. The real reason I wrote is this: If a married woman ever writes and asks you if she should tell her fantasies to her husband, tell her not to. It's the dumbest thing I ever did.—CLATTERTRAP

DEAR ABBY: When I was 18, I married a man who was 27, and we were so much in love we never thought we would have any problems. We have been married two years, and I am miserable.

He is a professional man, and I never got past the ninth grade. He is always correcting my English and has even suggested I go back to school and graduate.

Abby, I feel he thinks I am not good enough for him. If he loved me as I was, why is he ashamed of me now? What should I do? — UNEDUCATED

DEAR UN: Get in touch with your public education system and resume your schooling where you quit. It can be done by mail or in evening classes with other adults. Your husband loves you, or he wouldn't encourage you to graduate. Ther is no shame in not knowing — only in refusing to learn.

DEAR ABBY: What do you give a man who has everything? — I.M. SERIOUS.

DEAR SERIOUS: If I were with the Internal Revenue Department, I'd give him an audit!

The Formula

By NORMAN H. STARK

Adhesion is caused by a strong attraction between molecules of dissimilar substances in contact with each other. Wallpaper, attached to a different surface such as a plastered wall, demonstrates this principle.

Wallpaper, at least in my opinion, is an excellent decorating material. The almost endless variety of colors, designs and textures make it far more versatile than paint, and it seems to have a warmth that a painted surface doesn't have. But even the best grades do get worn and dirty in time, or you may just get bored with the same pattern and color year after year and want to replace it. Now comes the problem of breaking the adhesion so it can be removed.

To make a good inexpensive wallpaper remover you'll need one-half cup liquid detergent, two cups of water and one-half cup ethylene glycol (found at an automotive or hardware store). Mix the three materials together.

To use, mix one-cup of the concentrate into one quart of hot water and apply to wallpaper with a sponge. Allow to soak for ten minutes or so, and remove with a scraper. Store in glass or plastic container.

Like any chemical product you use at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.

Ingredient Unavailable

The Times ran an article August 6 for making a commercial-type carpet cleaner at home and has since learned that one of the ingredients is not available at Victoria drug stores.

Lauryl pyridinium chloride, the missing ingredient, is carried by some industrial chemists in the Vancouver area, but as far as can be learned is not sold in the small quantities called for in the carpet-cleaning formula.

However, for those who want to clean their own carpets, the following formula works, and all ingredients are easily available.

Take two ounces of liquid detergent and mix with one ounce of household ammonia in three quarts of water.

Spread the mixture in and around spots on the carpet, then sprinkle corn starch over the damp area and lightly brush in.

When dry, vacuum the cornstarch.

This will work on all carpets except where the carpet is wool and the spill penetrates the fibre like a dye. For those spills, commercial cleaners still remain the best bet.

Bakers Busy

Ten thousand years ago, Swiss Lake dwellers were the first bread makers. They ground and milled nuts and wild grains and baked the mixture in the strong sun. Seven thousand years ago, leavened bread was first made by Egyptians. In the early years of Canada, bread-making was a domestic art and many homes had outside ovens. Today in Canada there are more than 1,708 bakery operators, employing 20,246 people, manufacturing a varieety of bakery products for Canada's more than twenty-two million consumers.

CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

At the request of Legal Aid duty counsel Barry Mah Ming, Judge William Ostler remanded Garraway for one week for a bail hearing and possible further action.

Saanich police said last week a man who asked at the store for opiates produced a knife, but ran to an exit door when pharmacist David Henderson ran to another door. At the exit door, the man turned and took two steps but Henderson threw a shampoo bottle which flew out the door as the man left.

Loius Rickey Kasum, 17, of 626 Fernhill, was fined $250 by Ostler, put on probation for six months and instructed to do 40 hours of community work.

Kasum was found guilty Monday after a trial on a charge of assault causing bodily harm July 3 at the Esquimaly Sports Centre. He got into an argument with another youth, knocked the youth down with a punch, hit him twice more and then kicked him with a roller-skated foot. The victim suffered a 10-stitch cut one-half inch below his left eye.

Ostler said Kasum had no record and a good reputation, "but it is absolutely essential that people understand attacks of this kind . . . simply will not be countenanced by the courts . . . I abhor the use of boots."

Murray Henry Horton, 46, of 123 Simcoe, who only got $90 through his three offences, was ordered by Ostler to pay almost $580 in fines and restitution within three months.

Horton pleaded guilty to three counts of false pretences in two Victoria charges. Prosecutor Robert Mulligan said Horton wrote three worthless cheques June 4 and 5 to obtain a radio, a camera and a casette player worth a total of $429.44. The three items were then pawned for a total of $90.

Ostler fined Horton a total of $150, put him on probation for six months and ordered repayment of the $429.44. He specified Horton had three months to clean up both figures.

The guilty plea of Tery Bruce Simpson, 19, of 660 Wilson, to an Esquimalt charge of common assault early Thursday brought him a $75 fine from Ostler along with six months' probation and 45 hours of community work.

Mulligan said Simpson ran up from behind a young man, a complete stranger, in the 1100-block Esquimalt. He said Simpson hit the man on the back of the neck, then "danced around him with his fists up" urging a fight. The other man ran to the nearby Esquimalt police station.

At the station, said Mulligan, Simpson told the stranger that "you're dead and he would kill him after the trial." Simpson told Ostler he was "quite inebriated" and remembered chasing and swinging at the other man but not threatening him.

★ ★ ★

Nov. 9 was set by Ostler as the date for one trial and three preliminary hearings for Richard Allan Murray, 17, address not known.

Murray was first charged July 12 with possession July 10 in Saanich of a known stolen car. He was released on own-recognizance bail of $500 pending further hearing.

Later, he was charged with four counts of false pretences July 21-26 in Victoria, a Victoria home break-in and theft July 27 and a Saanich car theft July 28. Bail was refused on the last charge.

Murray was also sentenced Aug. 4 to 10 days for possession of marijuana and failing to appear in court July 19. He has pleaded not guilty to the false-pretences counts and chosen trial by county court judge on the other charges.

★ ★ ★

Surety bail of $500 was fixed by Ostler for Manuel Braga, 36, of 1328 Vining, who was remanded to Aug. 31 at the request of Mah Ming for further hearing of a two-count Victoria charge.

Braga was charged Wednesday with intent to wound in causing bodily harm July 23 to a Victoria woman "by cutting her with a knife" and with setting fire to a chesterfield on the same day in his home in a manner "likely to cause a building . . . to catch fire."

Publication or broadcast of bail-hearing details was prohibited in an order issued by Ostler at the request of Mah Ming.

Ronald Paul Garfield Cooper, 31, of 2319 Wark, chose trial in provincial court and pleaded not guilty to a Victoria charge of possession of a knife for a purpose dangerous to the public peace. Ostler set his trial for Dec. 10.

Cooper was arrested late Aug. 11 about two hours after police found him walking in the 2500-block Wark and suffering from a minor stab wound in the upper chest. They took him to hospital but he refused treatment and walked out.

★ ★ ★

Ostler set $500 surety bail for Sandor Borbely, 36, of 1655 Chambers, on a Victoria charge of possession of a knife Wednesday for a purpose dangerous to the public peace. The case was remanded one week for further hearing and the judge prohibited publication or broadcast of bail-hearing details at the request of Mah Ming.

★ ★ ★

In traffic court, guilty pleas to separate charges of driving with a blood-alcohol reading above .08 per cent meant fines of $600 each for Harold Lyle Carrigan, 34, of Vancouver, stopped Aug. 6 in Sidney, and John Frederick Hill, 43, of 4350 Harder, Aug. 9 in Saanich.

Richard Brian Waldie, 29, of 1122 Marchant, pleaded guilty to a Sidney charge of impaired driving July 30 and was fined $400.

He 'Died' To Live

WINSTON, Ore. (AP) — Glen Miller, 19, of Roseburg probably is alive today because he played dead after being attacked by a 450-pound Sumatran tiger while cleaning cages at the Wildlife Safari.

Miller, employed by the Wildlife Safari for one month, was listed in satisfactory condition after being mauled by the animal. He suffered bite wounds in the neck and claw wounds on his lower back.

Bonnie Riggs, the Safari's public relations officer, said Miller was cleaning cages in the tiger hut and apparently failed to close the gate. While his back was turned, the tiger pounced on him.

Miller played dead until the tiger backed off, then scrambled 15 feet to safety and closed the cage gate.

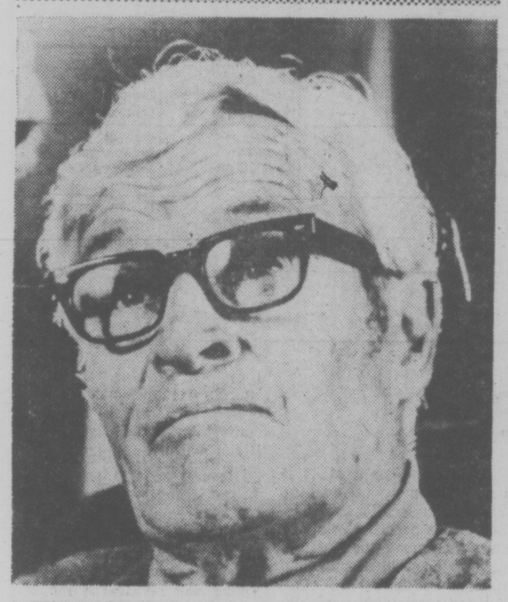
Finals Action Saturday In Hartford Open Golf

Don Bies, sudden-death winner over Hubert Green on the second extra hole of play in 1975, is the defending champion when final-rounds action in the $210,000 Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open golf tournament is broadcast by CBS Sports, Saturday, Aug. 21 at 1:40 p.m., following the 107th running of the travers broadcast from Saratoga, N.Y., and Sunday, Aug. 22 at 1:30 p.m. on Channel 12.

Jack Whitaker, Ben Wright, Frank Glieber, Rick Barry, Bob Halloran, and former U.S. Open Champion Ken Venturi will be the commentators for CBS Sports at the Wethersfield (Conn.) Country Club.

The field for the 25th anniversary of the Open will include Arnold Palmer, who returns to the site of his first PGA tour triumph in the United States in 1956, when the event was the Insurance City Open; Sam Snead, a legend in his own time and winner of many PGA tournaments over a period of 42 years as a professional golfer, including the 1955 Insurance City Open; and Lee Trevino, Bob Murphy, Dave Stockton, Julius Boros, 1976 Masters Champion Ray Floyd, Billy Casper and Lee Elder, among others.

With $42,000 going to the champion, the Open broadcasts will include play at the par 5, 497-yard 14th hole, a fairly simple hole, where many of the players will be putting for eagles if their second shot is accurate; the par 4, 391-yard 15th hole, where a good drive and a 7 or 8 iron will have the golfers putting for birdies; the par 5, 584 yard 16th, where a long iron off the tee is a logical choice to avoid a pond that spans the width of the fairway some 250 yards out; the par 3, 215 yard 17th hole, which Ras Allen "aced" during CBS Sports' coverage last year, a rather demanding hole calling for a long iron to a well-bunkered green; and the par 4, 427-yard 18th, a real good finishing hole with out of bounds to the golfers right, trees, rough, and a bunker to catch hooks to the left.



THE LATE W. A. Wellman's work will be featured Saturday at 8 p.m. on Channel 9 in a series profiling The Men Who Made the Movies. Another well-known film director, Alfred Hitchcock will be featured Saturday, Aug. 28.

Barry Morse 'Tired', Thinking of Retiring

By VICTOR STANTON

NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE, Ont. (CP) — Somewhere someone is plotting the untimely demise of Prof. Victor Bergmann.

But it's all pretty much a joke to Barry Morse, the English-born actor who originated the character of Prof. Bergmann on last season's successful space 1999 television series.

Morse, a former artistic director of the Shaw Festival and back here this summer as both director and actor, said in an interview that even "extravagant sums of money" couldn't persuade him to continue making the popular science-fiction series.

"I did promise that I would do a few more episodes sometime just to explain whatever the writers consider ought to be the character's exit — dropping off the back of the moon perhaps."

The series, in which Morse received third-billing after husband-and-wife stars Martin Landau and Barbara Bain, is set on the moon. In the initial episode, an explosion of nuclear waste stored on the moon blasted the satellite and its colony of scientists and astronauts out of earth orbit. The moon and its inhabitants have been travelling ever since, although the series title refers only to the date of the start of the moon's intergalactic voyage.

Proof. Bergmann is the colony's chief scientist and his most distinguishing characteristic is that he has a mechanical heart.

Morse said he had wanted to give the character "a little bit of originality, but the producers are so scared of that sort of thing."

The 57-year-old Morse also has been a regular on three other TV series, including the now-classic The Fugitive. In that series Morse played Detective Lt. Gerrard who pursued the title character David Janssen throughout four very profitable seasons.

His other shows were the short-lived The Adventurer with Gene Barry and The Zoo Gang with Brian Keith, John Mills and Lilli Palmer.

The latter, in which Morse was a Canadian Second World War veteran, was really only a mini-series and Morse is hopeful that the cast may get together again to do a few more episodes. The series is based on the late Paul Gallico's novel about a present-day reunion of wartime comrades and their involvement in perilous adventures.

In fact, he says, he is thinking seriously about giving it up, "in a few months perhaps."

"Forty-odd years is quite long enough to go around pulling faces for a living.

"I don't happen to think that our trade as a whole is all that desperately significant."

He feels he might have used his natural talents in ways that were "more genuinely creative in human terms" had he made a career in politics or education.

But, he adds, he really has no regrets.

"It's just that there are other things I feel I could do. And I may yet."

In particular, writing plays appeals to him.

"I'm very much encouraged by the realization that all the best plays are written by actors or by people of strong histrionic temperament."

At this year's Shaw Festival he plays Sir George Crofts in Shaw's Mrs. Warren's Profession and has directed the season's production of James Barrie's The Admirable Crichton.

But, apart from the obligatory character-eliminating episode or episodes of Space 1999, after the festival ends he has "no commitments at all."

"And it's marvellous. That's the best kind of luxury — when you're able to say, 'Don't call me, I'll call you.'"

Martial Eagles On CTV

The majestic head and powerful sharp talons of the eagle raise images of power in the minds of people thoughout the world. Untamed World visits the National Parks of Africa which are homes to 12 species of this mighty winged predator, Sunday, at 5 p.m. on Channel 8.

It is rare to find a tree in the Savannah that is tall enough for the eyrie of the great Martial eagle. This large African eagle has an 8-foot wing span and searches for food in an area usually not less than 60 square miles. Their favorite prey is the Dikdik, a small antelope about the size of a rabbit. They also remain alert for gamebirds like guineafowl and bustards and small burrowing mammals are never safe, once spotted by the Martial eagle.

The Bateleur eagle, smaller than the Martial eagle, is one of the most distinctive eagles in Africa. Bateleurs are late risers, waiting until the sun has warmed the air to leave the eyrie. Unlike other eagles the young Bateleur is still helpless at three months — unable to feed itself or tear fresh kill. This predator does not face severe winters, and can take its time to mature. In six years, it develops a rich, black adult plummage and is ready to seek a mate.

In addition to highlighting the African eagle, this episode also provides brief glimpses of the Chanting Goshawk, White Rhino, Ostrich, Vulturine Guineafowl, and the Nubian woodpecker.

Danish Writer Aired on CBC

On August 24 CBC radio's Tuesday Night begins with The Caryatides, a short story by distinguished Danish writer Isak Dinesen, who was Karen, Baroness Blixen, in private life. She was best known for Out Of Africa, a vivid account of her feelings and observations during the years she spent running a coffee plantation in East Africa. The Caryatides will be read by actress Maria Corvin, who, in the last few years, has devoted a good part of her career to presenting Isak Dinesen's work, in radio and stage.

Ray Bolger with Fiedler

Ray Bolger Dances Into Pops' Heart

Ray Bolger, the immortal scarecrow of The Wizard of Oz, dances, sings, soft-shoes and brings the Pops audience to its feet on Evening at Pops '76, Sunday, August 22 at 8 p.m. on Public TV 9.

A lithe, loose-jointed 72, Bolger beguiles the audience, orchestra and even Arthur Fiedler with songs such as Put on a Happy Face, Smiles, Old Soft Shoe, and a medley from The Wizard of Oz. He sweeps across the stage with grace, now and then erupting in a flurry of leaps, kicks, spins and one terrific bump and grind. Then, suddenly, he changes characters, becoming a Prince of Vaudeville, poising his body beneath the lights with a mimelike grace. At the end of his performance, Bolger does a splashy, meticulous routine of Once in Love with Amy.

NIMOY TO DISCUSS TREK'S POPULARITY

Leonard Nimoy, the actor who played the role of Mr. Spock on TVs Star Trek, discusses the continuing popularity of the science fiction series, Sunday, August 22 at 1 p.m. on Public TV 9.

On The Man Who Played Spock, Nimoy talks about Trekkies (as the avid fans of the series are called), the pointed-ears makeup, Spock's sex appeal, how he lives with the Spock character and what he has done since the series ended.

Since the last new episode of Star Trek was aired on network television in 1968 the words "cult" and "legend" have often been used to describe the kind of success it has enjoyed through syndicated reruns. A varied line of "Star Trek" products has been marketed, and "trekkies" hold conventions across the country.

To his millions of fans, the pointed-eared Mr. Spock, the Vulcan science officer of the Starship Enterprise, is the best-loved, most fascinating character in the series. Nimoy has become much in demand as a lecturer on the phenomenon.

Situation Comedy Out for Van Dyke

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Dick Van Dyke plunges into his third weekly television series this fall but unlike his two previous successes, the new show is not a situation comedy.

Viewers who missed Van Dyke's variety-musical special last October may tune in Labor Day to see a preview of the comedian's new series, Van Dyke and Company.

The loose-limbed, rubber-faced star took time out from a dance rehearsal recently and collapsed into a chair. He hugged and puffed with overplayed exhaustion.

"Man, this is tough, he said. "I've lost seven pounds so far, and this is only the beginning."

He worked only a fraction as hard in the original Dick Van Dyke Show with Mary Tyler Moore back in 1961. He won three Emmys during the five-year run. He devoted another three years to The New Dick Van Dyke Show.

Both series were half-hour sitcoms, a soft way of life compared to the grinding demand of a weekly hour variety show.

"It's not so bad," Van Dyke said wryly. "Last week I worked six days from 9 o'clock in the morning until 9 at night.

"This kind of show is a hundred times more demanding than situation comedy. A sitcom is only a 22-minute sketch. This is a real buster.

"I took a look at the show we just finished and the director told me I was on camera for all but 45 seconds of the entire thing.

"I just go home at night and fall face down on the pillow without dinner. No wonder I'm losing weight. But it's good for me. The less poundage I lug around the less tired I should get."

Van Dyke makes his home in San Diego now. He rents a house in the San Fernando Valley near NBC studios where most of his show is taped. His wife, Marjorie, prefers to remain in San Diego.

The network has signed Van Dyke for 15 shows. if the ratings are high, NBC will exercise its option for seven additional segments.

Contemporary Indian Art Profiled

A Navajo painter, former sheepherder, socialite and comedian, R. C. Gorman is the object of study on American Indian Artists, Tuesday, August 24 at 8:30 p.m. on Public TV 9.

Unlike an older generation of Indian Artists who studied at the Santa Fe Indian School Studio, Gorman learned his art in Mexico, working with muralist Carlos Merida. The impact of Orozco, Rivera, Siqueiros and Tamoya led him to abandon the conventional Indian representation of the human figure and concentrate instead on its mass and shape. His subsequent paintings, principally of Navajo women, radiate an attention and concern for the human form that are new to Indian painting.

Gorman's figures are full, fleshy, explored for their own sake. Whether in the lithographs that he has worked on since 1971, or the oils he has painted since his student days, Gorman strives to combine matter and spirit in his images of the body.

His use of color also is unconventional: his palette is composed of the bright, shocking hues of the Latin colorists. These have been used with notable effectiveness in a series of semi-abstract paintings inspired by Navajo blankets. In typical style, Gorman explains these paintings: "I adapt Navajo rug motifs to my canvasses because one day the rugs themselves will no longer be available. Also, polymers are less susceptible to moths than wool."

From the Canyon de Chelly hogan where he lived and tended sheep as a child to the galleries and nightlife of Aspen and Scottsdale, AMERICAN INDIAN ARTISTS explores the world R. C. Gorman moves through, and the work he creates out of his experience and imagination.

Bill "Count" Basie

BASIE'S RHYTHM STILL POPULAR

Bill "Count" Basie's musical autograph, "jump rhythm," popularized in the late Thirties with the hit One O'Clock Jump, still moves audiences almost 40 years later, as Basie demonstrates on At the Top, Wednesday, August 25 at 8 p.m. on Public TV 9.

The career that led Count Basie to a 40-year stint as leader of his own big band began with what appeared to be a series of bad breaks.

His first interest was in being a drummer, but a boyhood friend, Sonny Greer, had the same goal and eventually forced young Bill to another instrument — the piano.

In the course of his career, Basie has headlined every major jazz festival. And, at the age of 72, he can still bring a guest star in each of them.

Group Names Advertisers In Study on TV Violence

By RAYMOND E. MAPPS

NEW YORK (AP) — Television commercials for Burger King and Clorox are more associated with violence than those of Holiday Inn or Raid bug-killer, according to the National Citizens Committee for Broadcasting (NCCB) after a six-week study of television violence.

NCCB is a tax-exempt non-profit group advocating television reform. It is headed by Nicholas Johnson, a former member of the Federal Communications Commission.

The study said other sponsors of violent television fare include Tegrin Shampoo, Colgate-Palmolive, Gillette, Breck, Ford, Johnson and Johnson, American Motors and Lysol.

The group said the top 10 advertisers whose commercials were associated with the least violence televised during the period were Aramid Radial Tires, IBM, Lipton Products, No Nonsense Hose, Oscar Meyer, Proctor & Gamble Foods, Frito Lay Products, Chrysler Corp., Holiday Inn and Raid.

The report also ranked the 10 most violent and 10 least violent programs, according to the NCCB's study.

Heading the most violent list were the police dramas S.W.A.T., The Rookies, Starsky and Hutch, McMillan and Wife, Columbo, and Joe Forrester. Rounding out the top 10 were the Rockford Files, Sara, ABC Sunday Night at the Movies, CBS Friday Night at the Movies and NBC Saturday Night at the Movies.

Most of the 10 least violent programs were situation comedies. They included The Bob Newhart Show, The Mary Tyler Moore Show, Welcome back, Kotter, Chico and the Man, Doc and Rhoda. Others on the non-violent list were The Practice, The Waltons, Little House on the Prairie and Barney Miller.

The report said the violent shows act to desensitize the audience to violence, making confrontation and combat acceptable social behavior. For heavy viewers, it said, it encourages withdrawal, distrust, insecurity and unwarranted fear of crime in one's own life.

Alfred Schneider, vice-president of the American Broadcasting Companies Inc., said the report was of little use in helping the industry to understand how to handle violence responsibly on television programs.

CBS and NBC also questioned the validity of the survey.

Johnson said, "There is no longer doubt that violence in American television is doing us grave injury as a people. Information about its location, extent, and sponsorship, we believe, can be a constructive service to all who care about this national tragedy."

YOUNG RETURNS TO TV SCREEN

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Alan Young quit TV in late 1966. That was when he did the last episode of "Mr. Ed," the haypowered CBS comedy series where he played straight man to a talking horse for six years.

Then he did a Broadway play, "The Girl in the Freudian Slip." Two days after the critics booed, the play slipped out of sight. So did Young. He eased into work with the Christian Science Church.

Now in his fifties, a few pounds heavier, his dark hair now silver, Alan Young is easing back into television, starting with a small role as a small-town druggist in NBC's new "Gibbsville" series.

"It is a little odd, and I won't hedge," he said. "A Christian Scientist, if he's going to practice his faith, he doesn't feel he needs to take medicine . . . but an actor is an actor.

"If I had to play a drunk, I would hope I played a drunk with such great ability that nobody would like to be that."

Young, maybe the sole Hollywood star to hail from the hamlet of Tynemouth in England, grew up near Vancouver, Canada. He said he began in show biz there as a teen-ager by writing a comedy series for a local radio station.

When he took his first script there, he said, "they said, 'Very amusing, Young, but there's no one to perform it.' So Young did that, too." When the show clicked, he made mention of a pay raise. And was told, "For what you're asking, I can get a cowboy singer."

The actor, who now lives with his wife in suburban Encino, said around the time "Mr. Ed" was big, he began planning to leave show biz — "the Broadway play was my swan song" — to do church work full-time. Why?

"Oh, there are certain things you feel you've got to do," shrugged Young, who joined the Christian Science Church while in his teens. "I'd had good fortune and I figured I should sow a little back."

He said he spent two years at the church's Boston headquarters, helped set up its radio, TV and film arm, then spent two years travelling and lecturing for the church.

HAILED AS the world's hottest drummer, Buddy Rich hits the Mark of Jazz on Friday, Aug. 27 at 10:30 p.m. on Channel 9.

Danny Thomas' Miserable Lot

GLORIA KAYE (right) greets George Hamilton and Carroll Baker backstage at the grandstand show during Saskatoon's recent Pioneer Days celebrations. Kaye is the Alberta-born singer who co-stars in CBC's The Sunshine Hour. The versatile vocalist will appear as a guest star performer on other CBC-TV variety shows this season. Hamilton, the American-born country music artist who has a syndicated TV show out of Hamilton, and does both radio and TV in Great Britain. Baker, a Juno award nominee as best country singer this year, hails from Nova Scotia and is an RCA-adopted artist from the Gaiety label. She'll be seen performing on CBC-TV this season in a country music special in the Sounds Good series.

U.S. Historic Scenes Featured on Public TV

Independence Visitor's Centre, a film which recreates historic scenes from America's past, enjoys its Northwest premiere Thursday, August 26 at 7:30 p.m. on Public TV 9.

Shot on location in Independence National Historical Park in Philadelphia, the documentary uses vignettes and narration by Benjamin Franklin to bring to life the people, places and events that molded the country between 1775 and 1797.

Stars in the film include Eli Wallach (as Franklin), Anne Jackson (as Abigail Adams), Ken Howard (as Thomas Jefferson), Pat Hingle, (as John Adams), and Patrick O'Neil (as George Washington). Produced by Twentieth-Century Fox, Independence Visitor's Centre was directed by John Huston.

Independence National Historical park is administered by the National park Service and includes structures and properties in old Philadelphia which are associated with the American Revolution. In addition, to Independence Hall, the Park preserves the Liberty Bell, Congress Hall, old City Hall, the Second Bank of the United States and the Deshler-Morris House in Germantown.

CANADIAN ACTRESS PLAYS TITLE ROLE

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian actress Kate Reid will play the title role in the CBC television production of Nellie McClung, says John Hirsch, head of CBC television drama.

He said in a statement the drama about the Canadian suffragette, cancelled in March after the Association of Canadian Television and Radio Artists refused to grant a work permit to United States actress Kathleen Widdoes, will be taped in December.

He said the U.S. actress had been selected for the lead because no suitable Canadian actress was available when the drama was originally scheduled for production this summer.

CBC to Feature Forrester's Voice

The contralto voice of Maureen Forrester has been described in countless superlatives. It has been called lustrous and silken and pure velvet.

This month, CBC Radio showcases Maureen Forrester in two programs that provide a rich portrait of this internationally acclaimed contralto's vocal abilities.

With the CBC Winnipeg Orchestra, Miss Forrester performs Mendelssohn's Music to A Midsummer Night's Dream, Friday, Aug. 27, 2:30 p.m. on Canadian Concert Hall.

With John Newmark at the piano, she gives a special song recital recorded at the Radio in the 80s symposium in Ottawa, Saturday, Aug. 28, and Friday, Sept. 3, on Music Alive.

Both programs are repeated in stereo, Music Alive on Sun., Aug. 29, and Canadian Concert Hall on Tues., Aug. 31.

When Miss Forrester appeared at the CBC Winnipeg Festival in a program called Some Enchanted Evening, Winnipeg Tribune critic Madeleine Bernier heralded her performacne as "the most exciting program so far." Ronald Gibson of the Free Press described the entire evening as "captivating".

For the performance she is joined by Winnipeg soprano Heather Wilberforce, the CBC Winnipeg Singers and the CBC Winnipeg Orchestra under its regular conductor Boris Brott. Leonard Isaacs, host of Canadian Concert Hall, reads Puck's closing lines from the Shakespearean play.

More music from the CBC Winnipeg event, featuring Maureen Forrester, is scheduled on Canadian Concert Hall Oct. 8.

Songs of many lands are on the program that Miss Forrester gave for the international delegates to the Radio in the 80s symposium. With pianist John Newmark, she sings French folk songs by Benjamin Britten and Anthony Hopkins, three Negro spirituals by Roland Hayes, two works by Mahler, American folk songs by John Jacob Miles and Brockwell, and Spanish folk songs by de Falla.

From Canada, she sings Hanusja, a Ukrainian song collected in Saskatchewan, Susvarcyk, a Lithuanian song collected in Ontario, and There was an Old Woman in Our Town, all arranged by John Beckwith; along with The Maiden's Lament, a Newfoundland song arranged by Vaughan Williams.

They Are a People Who Cannot Forget

By STEPHEN HUME

The Palestinians throws light on the human dimension of a conflict that the media still views as a cowboy movie, Jews wearing white heats, Palestinians in black. A moving book, it portrays the bitterness of a nation in exile.

Frank Epp and John Goddard are two Canadians and former journalists who compiled this collection of photographs and interviews, most of which were conducted in occupied territories of the Middle East. The purpose of The Palestinians, Epp writes, is to provide "prolonged listening" to a people who have yet to be adequately heard. In the planning stages is a book on Israel. In this way Epp and Goddard plan to air both sides of the conflict.

Their present effort contains 32 pages of photographs by John Goddard of life as it is lived today by the Palestinians. His black-and-white studies remind us that real people exist behind the layers of political analysis produced every day by the newspapers and TV.

The Palestinians are a people who cannot forget they were ejected from the land they and their ancestors inhabited for thousands of years. Today most of them eke out an existence in refugee camps, under the threat of American-made jets and napalm. The lessons of Vietnam may have to be learned again in the country that gave birth to Jesus and Mohammed.

The Palestinians' plight can be summed up in the words of a farmer from Jericho: "Our problem is very simple. A foreigner came and took our land, took our farms and our homes, and kicked us out. We have in mind to return."

The exodus of Palestinians from their homeland in 1947-48 was a nightmare of violence. The people Epp talked to cannot forget it. In 1947 the UN, under British and American pressure, passed Resolution No. 181-11, approving the creation of a Jewish state from Palestinian land. The Palestinians were not consulted. Loudspeakers on the roofs of cars announced: "We don't want to kill, but for your own sake, move out." Yet killing was widespread, as were rape and theft.

A Jericho woman told Epp: "I was four, my brother three. They shot my father in our house." A program administrator for one of the camps remembers: "I was a child of nine in Haifa. We were in the lower part of the mountain. The Jews were in the high places. There was shooting in the street where we played."

THE PALESTINIANS: Portrait of a People in Conflict, by Frank H. Epp and John Goddard. McClelland and Stewart. $10.

In April of 1948, the International Red Cross reported that half the population of the Palestinian village of Dier Yasin had been wiped out by a Jewish guerrilla group. An Israeli cabinet minister would later justify the massacre by stating that there wouldn't have been a state of Israel "without the victory at Dier Yasin."

Yet the UN resolution was only the culmination of efforts begun in 1897 with the first world Zionist Congress, whose slogan was: "A people without land to a land without people." The only catch was that Palestinians lived in that "land without people."

Epp points out that thousands of Christian pilgrims tour Palestine each year, taking home with them colored slides of shrines and roads where Jesus once walked, but returning with "very little feeling for the helpless and homeless peoples among whom he might walk today."

He writes: "The Western press has always seen greater terror in guerrilla grenades than in bombs and flaming napalm dropped by state authority on villages and camps. However, terrorism meted out by the Palestinians, regrettable as it is, is minute by comparison with that which has been inflicted on them."

Though they remain hopeful that a solution will be reached, the Palestinians tell this story:

Nixon, Brezhnev, and Sadat are talking to God about their problems:

"Nixon: God, when will war in Vietnam end?

God: In two years, maybe.

Nixon (crying): Two years is too much.

Brezhnev: God, when will all the world unite?

God: In fifty years.

Brezhnev: Long live . . .

Sadat: God, when will Jews give back the land?

God (crying): . . .

Sadat: Why are you crying?

God: Not in my time."

The Palestinians will surprise you, especially if you have seen the conflict in the Middle East as a battle between an Israeli David and a Palestinian Goliath. You may find that the questions in this war are too profound for such an easy answer.

John Lilly: A Guide to the Cosmic Ocean

By JULIAN REID

"The Eternal Body of Man is the imagination," wrote William Blake, It is a statement that might well be echoed by Dr. John Lilly, a modern scientist-mystic who sums up his approach to "inner space" by saying: "I am an explorer who at any time can become a student in order to learn more . . ."

Before he was seven, Lilly was already obsessed with the question that still absorbs his energies: "What is Reality?" By his early teens he had concluded that the conventional answers were mere sterile word-games; seeking solider insights, he turned to experimental science. After graduating from the California Institute of Technology, his growing conviction that the key lay somewhere in the human body, which "functions as the intermediary between the Self and the Universe," led to further studies in biophysics and medicine, specializing in brain physiology. Dolphin brains are considerably larger than human ones; and this fact caused Lilly to embark on a systematic study of their owners.

His research on captive dolphins was described in his first two books — recently reissued as a single volume, Lilly On Dolpins. They attracted a wide readership, but his argument that "dolphins and whales are more intelligent than we are" failed to find favor among his scientific colleagues. In 1968, he closed his laboratory: "I did not want to continue to run a concentration camp for my friends, the dolphins."

Meanwhile, his attention was turning increasingly inwards. Years before, in the course of his psychoanalytic training, he had undergone three years of intensive psychoanalysis. "I realized, finally, that the depths of mind are as great as the depths of cosmic space. There are inner universes as well as outer ones."

Lilly was working for the National Institute of Mental Health when he launched his investigation into this inner realm. His chief tool was the isolation tank; there, immersed in "complete darkness and complete silence," he could allow his questing consciousness a free rein. In 1967, he presented the NIMH with his conclusions, in a report forbiddingly titled Programming and Metaprogramming in the Human Biocomputer. It was in fact an instruction-manual in "the rules for exploring the inner-outer spaces of consciousness."

Five years later came The Center of the Cyclone, a more popular account and the best introduction to the universes of John Lilly. Here he developed further his fundamental thesis that "in the mind there are no limits, except those placed upon that mind by itself. The only reason that you cannot reach higher states of consciousness is your own wish not to do so."

Next came Simulations of God — a survey of various limiting beliefs in which people ensnare themselves. Lilly is convinced that only by becoming aware of such self-imposed limits can we begin to transcend them. In what he calls "the Western yoga," wishful thinking has no place. "The yogas of science are disciplines leading to the union of man with the universe as it is, not as he wishes it to be. There is no compromise with reality as it really is. Cosmic love is ruthless; it loves you whether you like it or not."

Meanwhile, on a less cosmic level, Lilly's second marriage had disintegrated. And then, in 1971, "I met my soul-mate, the other half (female) of my Essence, as it were. I felt we had been together in previous lives and said, 'Where have you been for the last five hundred years?' She answered, 'In training.' "

"She" was Antonietta, his wife-to-be and now his collaborator; they have been together ever since. Together, Lilly explains, they constitute a "dyad" — a couple physically and spiritually complementary, their relationship a continuing and intensely creative mutual communion. "In this region," he confesses ruefully, "I have abandoned my usual skepticism. I believe in this and I disbelieve anything that interferes with it. To be here and now with Toni is all that is important to me."

Such is the essence of the Dyadic Cyclone as celebrated in the Lillys' new book, a piecemeal report on their collaborative works-in-progress. It is not a volume for those unacquainted with John Lilly's previous works; but for the initiate it will be most welcome. Particularly valuable are the appendices, which outline a complete program of exercises — "the minimum required to stay in a good state of spiritual, mental and physical health."

THE DYADIC CYCLONE: The Autobiography of a Couple, by John and Antonietta Lilly. Musson. $10.

For John Lilly is not merely an explorer; he is also a dependable guide to the limitless realm of Man's unrealized potentials. "Communication," he insists, "is an invitation to participate in the game of creating." Like Blake before him, he invites us to liberate ourselves from the stifling prison of our preconceptions: "Freedom is in the unknown. If you believe there is an unknown everywhere — in your own body, in your relationships with other people, in political institutions, in the universe — then you have maximum freedom."

Each of his works, in its own way, is a guidebook, presenting techniques for transcending our self-imposed limits. Each is a door opening into the unplumbed spaces where the inner and outer universes merge into one — that cosmic ocean where Man and Dolphin alike are wholly free.

Three For War Buffs

Surely no war in history has received so much literary attention as the Second World War. The stream of books dealing with every aspect of it seems to be unending. I already possess three long shelves filled with selected works, and still they come.

Of the three books recently received one will remain a prized addition to my collection: Noel Barber's The Week France Fell — June 1940.

I have been an ardent admirer of Barber's work since the long-ago days when we were colleagues on the London Daily Mail and he was the most widely read of all Fleet Street columnists. In the late 1930s he transferred to the Paris edition of the Mail, and labored there for a further eight years after the war before retiring, like another colleague, Alan Moorehead, to write books, the current one being his twenty-fifth.

Barber has always been interested in the reactions of ordinary people to extraordinary events, and so he hit upon the happy idea of intertwining the views and experiences of a select band of ordinary people with those of principals to enable readers to more readily identify with momentous periods in recent history.

He has done this several times, most notably in Sinister Twilight, his graphic description of the incredible stupidities that led to the inevitable fall of Singapore. He has done it again to show how, during one week in June, 1940, the fate of France was sealed.

In The Week France Fell the device works admirably to demonstrate how the citizens of France were left in pitiful ignorance as political and military leaders, along with the diplomatic corps, moved from place to place while carrying on incessant intrigues.

In his inimitable style, Barber takes his readers along refugee-clogged roads from Paris to Tours to Bordeaux and into conference rooms, embassies and boudoirs, as well as on brief digressions to London and Washington, in order to leave no doubt as to who was to blame for the sorry mess.

We see that the patriotic prime minister, the diminutive Paul Reynaud, and a handful of his colleagues, notably his most junior minister, Charles de Gaulle, were no match for the defeatist and violently anti-British majority led by the pro-German Baudoin and Laval, who were ably assisted by Weygand, the commander-in-chief, and the aged Marshal Petain, the revered hero of Verdun.

The courageous President Roosevelt, whose position was precarious (he was fighting for re-election and his country was neutral and largely isolationist-minded) gave what moral support he could, and Winston Churchill repeatedly flew to France to bolster Reynaud's morale. Both men liked Reynaud but neither could comprehend his vacillation.

This is not surprising for neither knew the extent to which Reynaud was completely dominated by his mistress, Countess Helene de Portes, whose love of Germany was only equalled by her hatred of Britain. Barber proves conclusively that this treacherous woman went to outrageous lengths to dictate the course of events and that she was at that time the unofficial but undisputed leader of France.

While Reynaud's mistress and her allies decided the fate of France, Parisians expected "the invincible army" to defend Paris block by block and Frenchmen in general continued to have blind faith in their military leaders. No one was informed that Paris had been declared an open city and that the leaderless army was retreating in disarray.

During all this treachery and bewilderment innumerable ordinary people kept their heads and did extraordinary things which Barber documents and weaves into the general narrative. The varied experiences of these brave, mainly foreign Francophiles, but also French nationals and even German fifth columnists, distinguishes Barber's work from the run-of-the-mill war books.

Another distinguishing featuring is the fact that Barber, apart from being a first-class researcher, has, where possible, personally checked facts with individuals concerned from Reynaud, Churchill, de Gaulle, and others, down to the humblest figures in his story.

The descriptions of unutterable stupidities, reminiscent of Tuchman's The Guns of August, combined with drama, pathos, elements of Greek tragedy, and an eye for the unusual and the farcical, make Noel Barber's work unique among war books and therefore precludes comparisons.

The other books I have both deal with the war in North Africa. Of the two, The North African Campaign 1940-43, by W. G. F. Jackson, is by far the most satisfying.

General Jackson, whose The Battle for Italy is regarded as the standard work on the Italian campaign, offers the same treatment in his new work, namely a condensation of official British, Commonwealth and U.S. war histories combined with snippets from official despatches of British commanders and extracts from books written by war correspondents and various generals, including German.

If you are a war buff this book, with its many maps, may suit you very well for it certainly covers the entire period of fighting from the early days against the comic opera Italian army to the eventual victory in Tunis over Rommel's formidable and magnificent Afrika Korps. The early campaigns in East Africa and the tragic and costly disaster in Greece are also included.

Weaknesses include Jackson's faint but discernible bias against Britain's famed Eighth Army (Jackson served in Tunis with First Army), countless typographical errors and a shockingly large number of inaccuracies in the index.

The War in the Desert, by Roger Parkinson, is a handsomely produced, profusely illustrated lightweight effort designed for popular appeal.

It's quite adequate for those who find in-depth works stodgy, but students of military history anxious to learn every detail of this last of the so-called "gentlemen's wars" should look elsewhere for satisfaction.

THE WEEK FRANCE FELL, by Noel Barber. Macmillan. $12.50.
THE WAR IN THE DESERT, by Roger Parkinson. General. $15.95.

Bert Herridge: Maverick Socialist of Kootenays

By PETER MURRAY

Bert Herridge was a bit of a character. Dubbed the "Puck of Parliament," he was a dogged individualist, conservative by nature but socialist by conviction. Courtly of manner and witty, he held the devoted allegiance of his rough-and-ready rancher and mine-worker constituents for 27 years. He was the champion of the down-and-out and the misfits, yet was rigidly Victorian in his attitude toward his own family and friends.

Obviously, a difficult man for a biographer to pin down. Maurice Hodgson has made a good try, but the real Bert Herridge, whoever he was, seems to have eluded him just as he slipped away from any attempt at categorization during his quarter century in office as a CCFer.

Part of Hodgson's problem is that Herridge probably doesn't rate a book-length biography. Despite his appeal to the voters of the West Kootenays he was never more than a minor political figure on the national stage. Besides lacking the qualities of leadership and originality of thought, he was naive and inconsistent in his views and often at odds with his party.

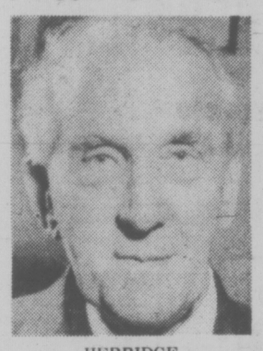
It was precisely these contradictory aspects of his nature that were responsible for his charm and the affection of his constituents. He reflected their inconsistencies and prejudices that sprang from an isolation from the main currents of Canadian life.

Herridge arrived at Nakusp from England with his family in 1905 at the age of 10. His father was unable to cope with the rugged Canadian ways and drifted off into a succession of menial jobs. Bert stayed with his mother, a regal, tough-minded woman who ran a boarding house, opened the first butcher shop in Nakusp and became deeply involved in community affairs.

Bert obviously inherited his political inconsistency from his mother, who once declared wistfully, "I could die happy if the Conservative Party would adopt the principles of the Regina Manifesto." The son also picked up some of her entrepreneurial talents as well, acquiring a lumber mill and large land holdings in the area over the years. Bert was always a flexible socialist.

Herridge joined up in 1914 along with the other young men of the region who had close ties with Britain, and was severely wounded in France. He returned to Nakusp in 1918 with a crippled arm and a wife, the English nurse who had helped restore his health.

Gradually Herridge drifted into politics with the Liberal party, which he soon left in disgust at the pork-barrel patronage. In the economic chaos of the 1930s it was not surprising that he should move over quickly to the new CCF party and the hufnanitarian concerns of its founder, J. S. Woodsworth.



HERRIDGE
. . . inconsistencies

He was elected to the B.C. legislature in 1941 and sat until 1945 when he defied the orders of the CCF hierarchy and accepted the federal nomination. The switch resulted in his expulsion from the party and he served his first term in Ottawa as the lone member of the "People's CCF."

His brief ouster was also partly the result of party uneasiness over Herridge's open alliance with the Communist-led Mine, Mill union of Trail in his riding. Whether the tie was just the result of political naivety or an astute move to win votes Hodgson does not make clear.

In any case, Herridge remained loyal to Mine, Mill over the years in its losing battle against the American-dominated Steelworkers' union. He continued to battle against the intrusion of the international unions despite their support by Canadian Labor Congress and showed little enthusiasm when the CCF allied itself with the CLC to form the NDP.

At the same time that Herridge was being accused by some of Communist leanings, he was fighting in Parliament against replacement of the Red Ensign by the new Maple Leaf flag, and was a firm supporter of the monarchy and all its trappings.

Apart from his long-running battle against the Columbia River Treaty, which had dire consequences for his riding and eventually resulted in the flooding out of his own home, Herridge was noted in Parliament mostly as a gadfly. His few moments of stardom usually came during the question period, when he could needle cabinet ministers with a mixture of quips and self-deprecating wit.

Hodgson notes that Herridge supported the Doukhobors in his riding during their period of turmoil in the 1950s, but curiously there is no mention in the book of the deportation of Japanese-Canadians from the coast to the Kootenays in 1942. Other members of his party were bravely outspoken against this move in the emotional climate of the war years. Did Herridge have no opinion, even though his riding was directly involved? It is known that he carried a life-long grudge and distrust of Germans after World War I.

Whatever his biases, there is no denying Herridge was motivated by a genuine concern for the welfare of individuals which was deeper than any commitment to ideology. His conception of socialism was the agrarian, co-operative brand of his rural constituents.

Herridge retired in 1968 and died four years later. He is fortunate to have made the acquaintance of the young man who was to take an interest in his career and write his biography. Few politicians who do not achieve positions of leadership are so honored.

In Defence Of Hollywood

Books

By ROBERT KIRSCH

The cracking sounds you hear are a succession of myths about great writers in Hollywood being demolished. Suddenly we see another side of F. Scott Fitzgerald — healthier, energetic, enthusiastic, not engulfed in unrelieved despair, his talent re-emerging in the unfinished novel, The Last Tycoon.

William Faulkner, who spent more than four years in Hollywood between 1932 and 1955, was not a hack at screenwriting; he was too professional to write down. He did not take the money and run.

And the other three writers whose experience in Hollywood is dealt with in this volume — Nathanael West, Aldous Huxley and James Agee — each found some source of support, utilized the working experience in fiction or made some considerable contribution to films.

Behind this fresh and readable study is an understanding of screenwriting, a respect for it that will not allow the patronizing and condescending attitudes to stand unchallenged. This doesn't mean that all screenwriting is good or that there aren't people who have sold out or that the Philistine producers (Jack Warner was reputed to have snarled that writers were just "schmucks with Underwoods") are products of the imagination.

What it does mean is that ignorance and prejudice have prevented the kind of exploration that might have given a more balanced picture of the Hollywood experiences of these five writers, not only of what Hollywood did to them but what they did for Hollywood.

It means also examining Southern California in the '30s and '40s as a centre. Listening, for example, to the words of Thomas Mann from Los Angeles in the summer of 1940, describing an evening of music — the violin sonata of Handel, the Bach partita in eight movements. "We dined with Charles Laughton, the uncannily amusing and slyly deep actor, who afterwards did a mangificent recitation from The Tempest . . . neither Paris nor Munich of 1900 could have provided an evening so rich in intimate artistic spirit."

To be sure, the writers themselves fed the myths, dramatized the agony, poked fun at the dream factory and the lotus eaters, the kitsch and the camp. But, says Dardis, their actions and their accomplishments are more reliable as an index to reality. At the very least, Hollywood provided a financial salvation: Fitzgerald, as always, was desperate for money with his wife under treatment, his daughter needing an education, his past books neglected, his short-story markets drying up. Faulkner, we find, was even more desperate for money, and his work in Hollywood was not the result of temporary needs but a continuing necessity (his "finances were in a state of permanent crisis"). West's financial dependence on Hollywood was total; his novels had little commerical success.

Huxley, who denounced both film and sound in an essay called Silence Is Golden, found film an attractive source of income, a temptation that became irresistible in time. Agee, a film critic turned screenwriter, left his secure job on Time to work in the movies and spent the rest of his life writing for films, his main source of income.

But the old dictum — take the money and run — never really applied. It is amazing and surprising that writers such as Fitzgerald and Faulkner, so scrutinized by scholars and biographers, should have relatively little attention paid to their Hollywood years. A part of Dardis' narrative consists in correcting much-repeated anecdotes, showing some of them as complete fictions, but most of it is new material obtained by interviews with colleagues, friends and observers and in the patient, meticulous research that is the true detection of this kind of writing.

Dardis goes far toward validating what many critics have suspected, that Hollywood by itself was not a corruption and diminishing influence. Problems such as drinking may have been exacerbated here but they were rooted in the writer's personality. More important, Dardis has shown persuasively that in each case the writer found in Hollywood and in movies material and techniques which enhanced his work.

Nathanael West, the most mysterious of the writers — "a labyrinth who concealed things even from himself," his friend Josephine Herbst said — worked continuously at screenwriting usually at Republic, "poverty row" of the studios. West got the most out of his Hollywood experience — "the schlock side of picture making" — for it led to The Day of the Locust.

"The creation of the curious atmosphere of that book is a triumph," Dardis writes. "No writer was ever as successful as was West in simultaneously destroying the old romantic myth of Hollywood glamor and replacing it with a brand-new one — the one of sinister decay in blazing sunlight."

Faulkner, Dardis says, got the subject for his novel The Fable, which he believed his masterpiece, from William Bacher and Henry Hathaway, who inspired him to do a treatment based on the idea that Christ and his disciples would return to earth as soldiers in World War 1 to die again. Dardis tends to underrate The Fable ("his longest, most ambitious and perhaps worst novel"). But the idea was not the only lesson Faulkner took from Hollywood. And not the only contribution he made. He worked best of all with Howard Hawks in a kind of improvisational exchange, encouraging the actors to invent. Dardis tracks down Faulkner's contributions to To Have And Have Not and The Big Sleep. Hawks just like having Faulkner "be there."

To an extent, each of the writers used the technique of film, the camera eye, the flow of scene and action. Agee's A Death In The Family is clearly influenced by that. Huxley began to think in film terms, was full of plans and projects, did have a high degree of success as a screenwriter with two fine screenplays, A Woman's Vengeance based on his The Gioconda Smile, and his Pride And Prejudice, which everyone at MGM thought so good that Huxley was told there would be work for him at the studio whenever he desired it.

There is much more. Dardis has sought out men and women whose reminiscences are of first importance. He has taken the inquiry into Hollywood's reality, beyond the B-film script of the artist who sells his soul to the producer and finds hell is a city much like Beverly Hills.
